Campaign act is challenged

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A suit challenging the constitutionality of the entire Campaign Finance and Disclosure Act was filed today in Cole County Circuit Court by the Labor's Educational and Political Club and Heavy Construction Laborers' Local 663 of Kansas City.

In a 26-page petition filed against Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, members of the Missouri Elections Commission, Cole County Clerk Stanley C. Diemler and Proseecuting Atty. James McHenry,, the labor goups contended that the law is "repugnant" to the U.S. and state constitutions.

Tthe campaign act was approved by Missouri voters by nearly a 4-1 margin one year ago, and it went into effect Jan. 1. Among other things, it requires the disclosure of campaign contributions and expenditures and prohibits direct or indirect political contributions to candidates by labor groups and corporations.

In a statement attached to the petition by Willard Wilkinson, executive secretary of the club, contended that the law "is so vague, indefinite and uncertain in almost all respects as to guarantee its unenforceability and would lead to certain chaos and uncertainty in the election process.

"The act imposes serious restraints on freedom of speech and violates the free and open election laws of Missouri," Wilkinson said.

The law was approved through a referendum, sought by the Missourians for Honest Elections afer the Missouri Legislature failed to approve a campaign disclosure act of its own.

"The people simply did not know what they were voting for. They couldn't know, because the proposition on the ballot failed to tell the people what it really meant," Wilkinson said.

"While it is the purpose of this suit to rid the people of some bad laws, it is not our purpose to defeat needed reform where it counts—in the need for full disclosure of campaign sources of funding and spending," he added. Wilkinson said that at the same time the petition is being filed, attorneys for the labor-political club are drafting a law to be introduced during the 1976 legislative session to revise the campaign act.

The suit asks the court to declare the law unconstitutional and to restrain the defendants from applying the law.

The suit attacks the campaign law on a number of points. It says the act violates the state constitution since it adds certain requirements for holding public office, namely complying with the campaign law. Under the constitution, the suit contended, requirements for holding public office in Missouri are only such things as those saying that a citizen must reside in the state.

The suit also said that the campaign act, when it was set before the voters last year in the form of Proposition 1, contains three separate and distinct subjects—personal disclosure, campaign practices and the creation of the Elections Commission. The suit says that if the act was to amend the constitution, as it was attempting to through the addition of requirements to hold public office, it should have not contained more than ne subject.

3 charged with theft

NEW MADRID — Felonious stealing charges were filed today in New Madrid County Magistrate Court against three rural New Madrid brothers, who were arrested at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, suspected of car theft.

John Davis, 22, and Fred Davis, 20, and a juvenile boy were charged with stealing a 1966 car owned by Tony Gene Riggins of East Prairie.

John and Fred Davis waived a preliminary hearing before Judge John R. Bailey, who bound them over to Circuit Court and set bond at $1,000 for each.

The juvenile is in custody of New Madrid County Juvenile officer J. J. Bloomfield Jr.

The brothers had been observed stripping the vehicle, which was at the Miles Wallace Farm, south of East Prairie.

A deputy sheriff said after the transmission and motor had been removed the car had been attached to a farm tractor and the men were pulling it along a levee road toward New Madrid for possible disposal.

Godspell to be presented at Middle School Monday night

"A circus, a clown show, a magic show, a game show, a thing of joy,' was the way one critic described "Godspell", the musical adaptation of the Gospel of St. Matthew which will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Sikeston Middle School Gymnasium..

A popular New York hit for three years, the high-spirited soft-rock musical thrilled audiences of believers and nonbelievers with its spirit of spontaneous love-thy-neighbor radiance.

The play opens with a stylized presentation of the "Tower of Babel", with members of the cast portraying major voices from the history of philosophy.

This seriousness quickly dissolves into a brilliant kaleidoscope of color, song and movement as the 11 performers spill onto the stage, costumed like Raggedy-Ann & Andy clowns to portray Jesus and his closest followers, acting out an assortment of high-velocity parodies, sight-gags, vaudeville routines, charades, visual puns and pantomimes.

The multi-colored clowns parody such Biblical characters as the tax gatherer and the woman taken in adultery, and they perform a series of key parables and incidentss in the gospels, such as the Prodigal Son and The Good Samaritan.

"Godspell" was conceived and adapted by a young university student, John-Michael Tebelak, who was only 21 at the time. His inspiration for the show arose on a snowy spring Easter Sunday during a sunrise service.

Composer-lyricist Stephen Schwartz, only two years older than Teblak, was a fellow student with Tebelak at carnegie-Mellon University, but they did not know each other until three years later when "Godspell" was brought to off-Broadway and Schwartz was commissioned to do new music and lyrics.

The rollicking rock music, for which "Godspell" has become so well known, forms the force behind a spirited and loving retelling of the gospel. Songs like "Day By Day", "We Beseech Thee", "The Light of the World" and "On the Willows" are all neatly woven around the parables and teachings of Jesus. The music, which varies from operetta to salvation rock and soft-shoe shuffles to lyrical ballads, is certain to have strong appeal to young and old alike.

A festive and playful show, "Godspell" captures the joy and energy of the gospel's good news. It is a musical that proclaims God and people. It is a celebration of man – dedicated to radiance, joy and love.

The Continental Theatre Co. production is being sponsored locally by the Sikeston Arts and Education Council. Tickets are available at Bank of Sikeston.

Cast members will present two workshops at Sikeston High School and one assembly at the middle school during the afternoon preceding Monday night's performance.

Judge removed from office

CHARLESTON — Lindsay Hurley was removed from office as associate judge of the Mississippi County Court Tuesday following a ruling by Judge Rex A. Henson of Poplar Bluff, special judge appointed to hear a nepotism suit filed against Hurley by the State of Missouri at the relation of Carol Bishop.

The suit against Hurley, who was serving his second term as associate judge of the first district, was filed in connection with the County Court's appointment in January of Bill Woods, Hurley's son-in-law, as director of the Mississippi County Ambulance Service.

Woods resigned as director of the ambulance service Oct. 22.

Judge Henson had taken under advisement the motions for summary judgments from the plaintiff of record, Mrs. Bishop, and from Hurley's attorney following a court hearing on Oct. 6. His ruling sustained the plaintiff's motion and overruled the defendant's.

Hurley's attorney had argued that Woods was promoted rather than appointed as ambulance director, since he had been employed as an ambulance driver attendant prior to becoming director. The service

Sikeston chamber to increase dues in 1976

Sikeston area Chamber of Commerce dues will have to be increased in 1976 if the chamber is to continue its operation, president Allen Blanton announced today.

Blanton said this year's dues fell about $5,000 short of what was needed and that interim financing had to be secured from local banks.

Dues collected by the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce are disproportionately lower than those paid by businesses in Poplar Bluff, Cape Girardeau and other communities of similar size, Blanton noted.

The chamber board of directors is currently considering a new dues schedule, which will be announced before the end of the year. In 1976, all dues will be collected the first of January instead of various months throughout the year.

Those businesses which have been paying dues in months other than January will have their dues prorated up to that month.

Blanton said, "If Sikeston is to keep pace with other progressive cities of our size, we must have an active Chamber of Commerce, and this will require a firm financial footing."

The units will be mostly family units with New Madrid getting 20 three-bedroom, 14 two-bedroom and six one-bedroom units. Howardville will get 10 three-bedroom, six two-bedroom and eight one-bedroom units.

Blades said he feels this is the first step in much-needed Rental Housing for the Bootheel. While building costs continue to rise, we believe this is the only way many families can get safe and sanitary housing."

He said processing of the final application will take about 60 days. He hopes to have everything ready to start construction by Jan. 1.

U.S. NUTS ABOUT BOLTS

Nuts and bolts have held this nation together for 200 years — though sometimes, reading the news from Washington, one gets the impression that the former are much more prevalent than the latter.

A patriotic Bicentennial release from the Trans Union Fastener Group, which distributes more than 30,000 kinds of mechanical fasteners, points out that pins and screws not only held American muskets together in the fight for independence but are vital in everything from household appliances to outer space communications.

For example, it was the failure of a screw to remain tight that apparently caused the breakdown of a $78,000 television camera intended to broadcast in color from the moon in 1969.

In 1840, when Micah Rugg and Martin Barnes formed a partnership in Connecticut to establish the nut and bolt branch of the industry, their six employes produced a total of 500 carriage bolts a day.

Today, 600 plants employing 67,000 people produce more fasteners in one minute than Rugg and Barnes could produce in seven years. In 1975, U.S. industry will use more than 200 billion nuts, bolts, rivets and screws and the metal fastener business will top $2.7 billion.

Think about it.

It would appear to be anybody's guess what farmer reaction to restrictions on exports of wheat will be. According to Santa Fe Crop Report, many indicate they are delaying planting some of their intended acreage and may reduce actual plantings below the acreage they had intended to plant if they are not relieved of what many refer to as "government interference" in the usual process of marketing. This reduction in acreage, if carried out, could result in a decrease in the amount of wheat available in 1976, together with a higher price per bushel being paid to producers for the crop.

The possibility of continued restrictions on export marketing together with continued increased costs of production (fuel, seed, fertilizer, machinery and labor) has caused many farmers to consider alternate crops so as to become more diversified to spread the risks of weather, uncertain markets, insects and diseases, etc. over a broader base.

IT'S YOUR TAXES THEY'RE SPENDING...

How would you like to borrow a million dollars from the United States government and have 50 years to pay it back (if you do) interest-free with a 10-year grace period to boot?

Incredible as it may sound, these are the terms under which the World Bank's International Development Association (IDA) has distributed billions of dollars to its 66 member countries. The fund from which IDA doles out its largess is raised by 25 countries and of course by far the biggest contributor is Uncle Sam--up until 1974 providing almost 40 per cent of the fund's billions.

Through mid-1973 IDA had authorized a total of 428 development credits amounting to $5.8 billion. Its loans are for 50 years and bear no interest. After a 10-year grace period, 1 per cent of the principal is repayable annually for 10 years and 3 per cent in each of the remaining 30 years. There is a yearly service charge of three-quarters of 1 per cent on the disbursed portion of each loan to cover administrative costs.

Defenders of America's participation in the fund will tell you that it goes for projects in countries where the per capita yearly income is less than $375. But the issue here is not whether all of this money from American taxpayers is being spent for humanitarian needs--some of it is, a lot of it isn't--but whether we can afford it. We maintain we can't.

Rep. Clarence Long (D-Md.) complained that "What has disillusioned most of us is the fact that the money has not gone to these poor people." And indeed there have been abuses.

For example, it is no secret that many recipient countries take the funds and lend them out again to other countries at prevailing interest rates. Moreover, at least 30 per cent or more of IDA's loans have gone for industrial power plants and transportation facilities and a far smaller percentage for agriculture to feed the hungry and education to teach the illiterate.

India, for instance, consumes 35 per cent of IDA's budget annually and has received about $2.5 billion in loans since IDA's inception in 1961. Certainly, it is evident that these vast resources helped give India the financial wherewithal to develop its nuclear device.

IDA gave $20 million to Bangladesh only to have the money used for a telecommunications program which included development of microwave, UHF, and VHF systems. Meanwhile, Bangladesh has been ravished by famine. Similar expenditures of dubious benefit to the truly poor have been made with IDA's easy-credit loans.

IDA's authorized cost over the next four years: $1.5 billion.

DEFENSE POLICY REFLECTS MINORITY POINT OF VIEW

The Congress is not representing the people in regard to national security. That is the only conclusion one can come to from an analysis of the latest survey conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation of the public's attitudes on national defense issues. For example, three-fourths of the people, (76 per cent), up from two-thirds last year (67 per cent), say they believe that "the United States should have military strength greater than that of the Soviet Union." Yet, once again this year, the Congress chopped the Defense Budget in the critical areas of research and development and weapons purchases. In other words, our defense policies continue to reflect a minority point of view.

The results of the ORC survey have been combined with the views of members and prospective members of the American Security Council's 1975 National Security Issues Poll in which 67,800 participated. The ASC poll results to the questions are listed first under each question, followed by the ORC poll results.

Question 1. Do you trust the Soviets to keep the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement even though there is no provision for onsite inspection by either side?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 1 per cent Yes, 97 per cent No, 2 per cent undecided.

Opinion R.C. 1,022 part.: 21 per cent Yes, 74 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided.

Question 2. Should the U.S. increase its naval forces in the Mediterranean and Indian Oceans at least to match current Soviet naval build-up in order that we may protect our national interests in the Middle East?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 91 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 7 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 77 per cent Yes, 18 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided.

Question 3. Former Attorney General Saxbe criticized the FBI's counter intelligence measures to disrupt radical groups. FBI Director Kelley replied that failure to disrupt "violence prone groups" would be an abdication of the FBI's responsibilities to the American people. Do you agree with Kelley?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 94 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

This question was not asked by Opinion Research Corp.

Question 4. Should the United States have military strength greater than that of the Soviet Union?

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 76 per cent Yes, 21 per cent No, 3 per cent undecided

Question 5. Do the American people have the right to be full informed about the goals and activities of organizations who are dedicated to the overthrow of the U.S. government by force and violence?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 98 per cent Yes, 1 per cent No, 1 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 92 per cent Yes, 7 per cent No, 1 per cent undecided

Question 6. Should the U.S. have a military research and development program at least as large as that of the Soviet Union?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 96 per cent Yes, 1 per cent No, 3 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part;: 85 per cent Yes, 11 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

Question 7. In what is known as the Cold War, do you believe the U.S. should have a national objective of turning back the growth of Communism?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 89 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 9 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 73 per cent Yes, 21 per cent No, 6 per cent undecided

Question 8. In the first Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, the U.S. and Russia agreed not to protect their citizens against nuclear missiles. Instead of that, would you perfer that the U.S. develop the capability to destroy most missiles before they can strike our cities?

ASC 67,800 participants: 93 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 86 per cent Yes, 10 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

Question 9. Should the United States give up its sovereignty over the Panama Canal?

WHYn'TCHA SMILE ONCE, MR. NADER!

By DON OAKLEY

Testifying before a congressional investigating committee the other day — it must have seemed like old home week in the nation's capital — was Ralph Nader.

This time the object of the consumer crusader's terrible swift sword of righteous wrath was the life insurance industry which he said has been for almost 70 years "a smug sacred cow feeding the public a steady line of sacred bull."

The high costs of insurance, he said, "are a national disgrace."

Switch to a recent issue of "Trial," the magazine of the American Trial Lawyers Assn. Here the national disgrace was the country's private pension system, which Nader characterized in an article as "the worst fraud ever perpetrated" on the American people.

Another national disgrace we are all familiar with is the government itself, thanks to a multivolumed Nader task force report on Congress last year, which informed us that what we have is not a representative democracy but a presidential monarchy.

Going back long before this, past anynumber of private ripoffs of the public, was Nader's exposure of the automobile industry. "Crime in the suites" and "corporate criminals" are still among his f avorite expressions.

There seems no end to the ore of corruption mined by Nader. It is enough to make one cry in despair: Has the world ever witnessed a society so rotten and cruel and in a word, disgraceful, as that of the United States? Life must be aperfect hell for its citizens, defrauded daily in dozens of ways as they are.

Yet thee is one more disgrace — the disgrace that America could produce such a handsome, talented — nay, brillaint — young man without a shred of the s aving grace of humor. A society that can do that must be ALL bad.

Has anyone ever seen a picture of Ralph Nader smiling? Can anyone imagine him even grinning broadly. much less laughing at a joke with friends? For that matter, can anyone imagine the guru of the life-is-earnest-life-is -real school having friends?

Ralph Nader, of course, has made a mark on american history that places him far beyond the petty reach of a nitpicking editorial writer.

A Harris poll taken around the end of last year found that 60 per cent of the public still believes Nader has done "more good than harm," if only for his shaking up of American businessmen.

Still and all, like the henpecked husband who is constantly bombarded with criticism and nary a word of praise and who learns to develop a deaf ear, it's possible the American people may get to the point where they react to each new Nader exposure of yet another national disgrace with a big, fat yawn.

Honestly, Ralph, won't you tell us one thing good about our society? And try a smile once. It'll not break your face.

Half Work, Full Pay

Inside Bankruptcy: NYC Civil Service is nation's biggest leisure village

WASHINGTON — None of the newmen who covered President Ford's Big Apple speech have my expertise. They didn't roll in the muck and blood of its gutters. I did, when a kid. They didn't lead a Robin Hood gang on the sidewalks of New York. I did. They don't love the Big Town as I do. So I'm privileged to talk angrily of those who've run it into the ground and bankruptcy.

I've rolled for hours in unmarked police cars listening to the "squawk boxes" (two-way radios). I know of a riot in a ghetto where teenagers were terrorizing their elders and heaving rocks at uniformed cops and detectives. Those missiles drew blood. Some of the police went for the rockthrowers. The cops' superior officers blocked the cops. Knock it off. Go home. Don't touch those kids. Don't rock the boat. That's orders from headquarters.

Headquarters wasn't the police commissioner. It was City Hall. And City Hall at that time was a presidential campaign center for hizzoner the mayor, John V. Lindsay, who appeared not to want to alienate the proletariat. The cops figuratively were handcuffed during many riots, demonstrations and arrests. So the city ran scrared. Corporations and the citizenry, black, white and Puerto Rican, ran for the suburbs.

Big companies ran to Houston. Some to nearby Connecticut. Like Texaco, which is evacuating 20 of its 35 floors in the Chrysler Building - moving 1700 of its 2200 employes to Westchester. Out went the big firms. Down went the tax base.

And I'm convinced that an accurate General Accounting Office audit of the actual work time put in by scores of thousands of civil servants would show that with vacations they average perhaps six or seven months a year for a full year's pay.

There's the matter, for example, of the social service case aides. Their union contract grants them half a week's work for a full week's wages if they take college classes 10 hours a week. Even with the classes this gives them 10 hours for nothing on what should be a 40-hour week.

Just ask the American Arbitration Association about this one. Some of these social workers sought to set a pattern by filing a grievance because they weren't getting an additional paid lunch hour every day. This would have given them 45 hours pay for working 20 and going to college for 10 hours.

And one recent day, despite the desperate financial crunch, tens of thousands of civil service desks were un-personned. Disaster alert? No. It was paycheck-cashing time. Supposedly 15 minutes. Runs into a half hour. And it comes between two coffee breaks.

As for the school system -- regular and higher education -- these tuition-free institutions, the Board of Education and the City University of New York employ well over 100,000 persons. Check their work year. Let me know if it comes to more than what would be an ordinary six months' stint each year for a full year's pay. I'll wager it won't.

As for the sanitation department workers mentioned by President Ford, just put the same yard rule to them. Count their actual hours worked. See how much of the paid year they goof off. Not all. But enough to slash "productivity" and leave the garbage elephant-eye high in many streets.

Generally these street cleaners are a surly lot. Some years ago when their president, John DeLury, Nelson Rockefeller's close friend and political ally, tried to sign a routine contract, the membership nailed him in City Hall square, pelted him with rotten eggs and bounced him once or twice. So now the "sanitation" men's contract gives them a basic $15,000 yearly plus some $7,500 a year in fringes. Total cost to the city is $22,500 annually according to Persident Ford. And unlimited sick leave. Also one month's vacation after one year seniority.

And then there are the semi-skilled intellectuals who moan for the city's prisoners. Do you know that until recently inmates had the privilege of sending holiday, birthday, and other happy talk telegrams free of sharge to the outside? Candygrams, too. Which they charged to the prison and some of its correction department officials?

And until this column campaigned the welfare department out of the welfare-hotel practice, the city paid as much as $2,000 a month to house some of its allegedly "homeless" clients -- and in some of the best hotels at that.

Multiply all this by thousands of other practices – and don't forget the physical threats to supervisors on the night shift if the latter attempt to report massive goofing off. All this costs New York hundreds of millions a year.

And then there are the civil service pension funds for which the city picks up the bill. No one really knows how much this costs. I consulted one top banking official and he estimates the accumulation of teachers' and other pension funds at well over $12 billion.

Such largesse everywhere has forced some retrenchment. Let's not forget Mickey Maye's firefighting union members. Their ranks have been cut from 11,800 to 8,800. Now some 65 per cent of those retiring throw in their papers because of disability. And Maye told the President the other day that if winter comes, increasing fire deaths of the citizenry surely won't be far behind.

No city can live so high on the hog and survive. No city can be the wind tunnel to the White House for ambitious politicians and survive.

We used to sing New York, New York, it's a wonderful town. It was. It can still save itself. But unless its employes put in a full year's work for a full year's pay, its budget will go to $20 billion a year, Abe Beame once told me. Even the nation couldn't survive much more of that.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Navy Neglects Emergency Carriers
with
LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — In these uneasy times, the Navy may be alerted any day to airlift endangered Americans from some trouble spot. Yet the seven helicopter carriers, which are most likely to be used for an evacuation, have been permitted to fall into woeful disrepair.

The Navy seems able to find funds when an Admiral wants his quarters refitted or an ex-Admiral applies for a contract as a consultant. Yet there isn't enough money, apparently, to maintain the rusty, leaky tubs which are supposed to be ready for any emergency. The Navy crewmen and Marine assault troops on board also often live in squalor.

We began investigating conditions aboard the helicopter carriers a year ago. But the Navy, we found, had swept the embarrassing facts under the secrecy stamp. Not that there is anything legitimately secret about the Navy's neglect. It is merely a Pentagon habit to censor embarrassing news by classifying it.

We were able, nevertheless, to get the classified inspection reports, and on Nov. 11, 1974, we described the deplorable conditions aboard the Okinawa and, later, the Iwo Jima. The other five helicopter carriers, we suggested, weren't in much better shape.

Suddenly, three astonishing things happened: (1) the Navy began allotting money to repair the Iwo Jima and Okinawa; (2) we are flooded with letters from sailors urging us to write about their own unseaworthy ships; and (3) the Navy brass stamped an even higher classification on the reports of its jaunty chief inspector, Rear Adm. John Bulkeley.

At one closed meeting, the participants were advised that the newer classification and special security precautions were necessary to "keep the reports out of Jack Anderson's hands."

Despite the coverup, however, we have obtained copies of the latest inspection reports. One lengthy report describes conditions aboard the New Orleans.

Some vital electronic gear was installed on this helicopter carrier more than 18 months ago. Yet Bulkeley's boys found that "complete documentation is still not aboard ship." The "documentation" is needed to properly operate the equipment.

"The passive electronic warfare capability" for gathering seaborne intelligence and other information "is degraded," the report charges. Even the "jib cranes," used to lift small boats and supplies onto the deck, "are in a deteriorated condition with one out of commission," the report adds.

The Navy, in response to our inquiry, insisted it is doing everything possible to keep up the fleet.

Footnote: At the very time we were writing this story, another letter arrived from the mother of a seaman aboard the New Orleans' sister ship, the Inchon. She urged us to keep reporting on the fleet's condition. Her son's ship, she wrote, "is now two years past its yard period and has had innumberable breakdowns."

UNFAIR TO BLACKS: The oil companies have been patting themselves on the backs and boasting what good citizens they are for throwing contracts to black businessmen.

The oil crowd staged a "minority procurement fair" in Houston, for example, to dramatize how generous they are to blacks. But privately, some blacks called it the "minority procurement unfair."

For when it comes right down to it, most of the minority subcontracts handed out by the oil industry are for janitorial or other menial services. The big money is held tightly within what one black entrepreneur called the inner circle of "good ol' boys."

The industry claims, as part of its ballyhoo, that it awarded $200 million worth of business to minority firms last year on the Alaskan North Slope project alone. This is astonishing since the nation's top 100 black firms, all together, achieved little more than $200 million in total sales last year.

But perhaps a case study is more revealing. Mark Rivers is a West Point graduate and accomplished businessman who helped make the Watts Manufacturing Company the top black-owned manufacturing firm in the nation.

Early this year, he put together a firm called California Energy Systems. No one questions that Rivers' new company is competent. It can design, engineer, fabricate and deliver the equipment needed to drill for offshore oil and gas. Yet after six frustrating months, his firm has yet to come up with a single significant contract.

Rivers called upon Exxon, the oil colossus, a total of 17 times. Each time, he was given a sympathetic audience but no contract. When he related his experience to Wilbur Hunt, the Exxon represenattive at the Houston procurement fair, he was told he should have made an 18th visit.

Rivers had a worse time with British Petroleum, which put him on the bid list. But just as his firm came up for a contract, it was abruptly taken off the list, and the contract went to a different company.

A source inside BP-s contracting company told us that the president of BP's U.S. operations, Tom Sharpe, personally ordered Rivers' company removed from the bid list after a meeting with Rivers.

Since BP operates on American soil in Alaska, it is required by the Interior Department to do some minority contracting. But our sources clain that most of BP's minority business goes to "front" operations. A minority businessman is simply used for window dressing, in other words, with the real profits going to non-minority controllers.

Rivers also got the runaround from Occidental. Now Gulf and Mobil have agreed to inspect his facilities. It remains to be seen, however, whether they will put their money where their mouths are.

Footnote: A BP spokesman denied that Rivers' firm was ordered off the bid list by Sharpe. He said they are still eligible for contracts. He also denied that "fronts" were used to fulfill minority business requirements. Exxon and Occidental spokesmen defended their firms' minority business records, and indicated that Rivers' firm would be given every consideration in the future.

THEY'RE SPENDING...

How would you like to borrow a million dollars from the United States government and have 50 years to pay it back (if you do) interest-free with a 10-year grace period to boot?

Incredible as it may sound, these are the terms under which the World Bank's International Development Association (IDA) has distributed billions of dollars to its 66 member countries. The fund from which IDA doles out its largess is raised by 25 countries and of course by far the biggest contributor is Uncle Sam--up until 1974 providing almost 40 per cent of the fund's billions.

Through mid-1973 IDA had authorized a total of 428 development credits amounting to $5.8 billion. Its loans are for 50 years and bear no interest. After a 10-year grace period, 1 per cent of the principal is repayable annually for 10 years and 3 per cent in each of the remaining 30 years. There is a yearly service charge of three-quarters of 1 per cent on the disbursed portion of each loan to cover administrative costs.

Defenders of America's participation in the fund will tell you that it goes for projects in countries where the per capita yearly income is less than $375. But the issue here is not whether all of this money from American taxpayers is being spent for humanitarian needs--some of it is, a lot of it isn't--but whether we can afford it. We maintain we can't.

Rep. Clarence Long (D-Md.) complained that "What has disillusioned most of us is the fact that the money has not gone to these poor people." And indeed there have been abuses.

For example, it is no secret that many recipient countries take the funds and lend them out again to other countries at prevailing interest rates. Moreover, at least 30 per cent or more of IDA's loans have gone for industrial power plants and transportation facilities and a far smaller percentage for agriculture to feed the hungry and education to teach the illiterate.

India, for instance, consumes 35 per cent of IDA's budget annually and has received about $2.5 billion in loans since IDA's inception in 1961. Certainly, it is evident that these vast resources helped give India the financial wherewithal to develop its nuclear device.

IDA gave $20 million to Bangladesh only to have the money used for a telecommunications program which included development of microwave, UHF, and VHF systems. Meanwhile, Bangladesh has been ravished by famine. Similar expenditures of dubious benefit to the truly poor have been made with IDA's easy-credit loans.

IDA's authorized cost over the next four years: $1.5 billion.

DEFENSE POLICY
MINORITY POINT OF VIEW

The Congress is not representing the people in regard to national security. That is the only conclusion one can come to from an analysis of the latest survey conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation of the public's attitudes on national defense issues. For example, three-fourths of the people, (76 per cent), up from two-thirds last year (67 per cent), say they believe that "the United States should have military strength greater than that of the Soviet Union." Yet, once again this year, the Congress chopped the Defense Budget in the critical areas of research and development and weapons purchases. In other words, our defense policies continue to reflect a minority point of view.

The results of the ORC survey have been combined with the views of members and prospective members of the American Security Council's 1975 National Security Issues Poll in which 67,800 participated. The ASC poll results to the questions are listed first under each question, followed by the ORC poll results.

Question 1. Do you trust the Soviets to keep the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement even though there is no provision for onsite inspection by either side?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 1 per cent Yes, 97 per cent No, 2 per cent undecided.

Opinion R.C. 1,022 part.: 21 per cent Yes, 74 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided.

Question 2. Should the U.S. increase its naval forces in the Mediterranean and Indian Oceans at least to match current Soviet naval build-up in order that we may protect our national interests in the Middle East?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 91 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 7 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 77 per cent Yes, 18 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided.

Question 3. Former Attorney General Saxbe criticized the FBI's counter intelligence measures to disrupt radical groups. FBI Director Kelley replied that failure to disrupt "violence prone groups" would be an abdication of the FBI's responsibilities to the American people. Do you agree with Kelley?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 94 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

This question was not asked by Opinion Research Corp.

Question 4. Should the United States have military strength greater than that of the Soviet Union?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 85 per cent Yes, 5 per cent No, 10 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 76 per cent Yes, 21 per cent No, 3 per cent undecided

Question 5. Do the American people have the right to be full informed about the goals and activities of organizations who are dedicated to the overthrow of the U.S. government by force and violence?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 98 per cent Yes, 1 per cent No, 1 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 92 per cent Yes, 7 per cent No, 1 per cent undecided

Question 6. Should the U.S. have a military research and development program at least as large as that of the Soviet Union?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 96 per cent Yes, 1 per cent No, 3 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part;: 85 per cent Yes, 11 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

Question 7. In what is known as the Cold War, do you believe the U.S. should have a national objective of turning back the growth of Communism?

ASC, 67,800 participants: 89 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 9 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 73 per cent Yes, 21 per cent No, 6 per cent undecided

Question 8. In the first Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, the U.S. and Russia agreed not to protect their citizens against nuclear missiles. Instead of that, would you perfer that the U.S. develop the capability to destroy most missiles before they can strike our cities?

ASC 67,800 participants: 93 per cent Yes, 2 per cent No, 5 per cent undecided

Opinion R.C., 1,022 part.: 86 per cent Yes, 10 per cent No, 4 per cent undecided

Question 9. Should the United States give up its sovereignty over the Panama Canal?

WHYn'TCHA SMILE ONCE, MR. NADER!
By DON OAKLEY

Testifying before a congressional investigating committee the other day — it must have seemed like old home week in the nation's capital — was Ralph Nader.

This time the object of the consumer crusader's terrible swift sword of righteous wrath was the life insurance industry which he said has been for almost 70 years "a smug sacred cow feeding the public a steady line of sacred bull."

The high costs of insurance, he said, "are a national disgrace."

Switch to a recent issue of "Trial," the magazine of the American Trial Lawyers Assn. Here the national disgrace was the country's private pension system, which Nader characterized in an article as "the worst fraud ever perpetrated" on the American people.

Another national disgrace we are all familiar with is the government itself, thanks to a multivolumed Nader task force report on Congress last year, which informed us that what we have is not a representative democracy but a presidential monarchy.

Going back long before this, past anynumber of private ripoffs of the public, was Nader's exposure of the automobile industry. "Crime in the suites" and "corporate criminals" are still among his f avorite expressions.

There seems no end to the ore of corruption mined by Nader. It is enough to make one cry in despair: Has the world ever witnessed a society so rotten and cruel and in a word, disgraceful, as that of the United States? Life must be aperfect hell for its citizens, defrauded daily in dozens of ways as they are.

Yet thee is one more disgrace — the disgrace that America could produce such a handsome, talented — nay, brillaint — young man without a shred of the s aving grace of humor. A society that can do that must be ALL bad.

Has anyone ever seen a picture of Ralph Nader smiling? Can anyone imagine him even grinning broadly. much less laughing at a joke with friends? For that matter, can anyone imagine the guru of the life-is-earnest-life-is -real school having friends?

Ralph Nader, of course, has made a mark on american history that places him far beyond the petty reach of a nitpicking editorial writer.

A Harris poll taken around the end of last year found that 60 per cent of the public still believes Nader has done "more good than harm," if only for his shaking up of American businessmen.

Still and all, like the henpecked husband who is constantly bombarded with criticism and nary a word of praise and who learns to develop a deaf ear, it's possible the American people may get to the point where they react to each new Nader exposure of yet another national disgrace with a big, fat yawn.

Honestly, Ralph, won't you tell us one thing good about our society? And try a smile once. It'll not break your face.

Half Work, Full Pay
Inside Bankruptcy: NYC Civil Service is nation's biggest leisure village

WASHINGTON — None of the newmen who covered President Ford's Big Apple speech have my expertise. They didn't roll in the muck and blood of its gutters. I did, when a kid. They didn't lead a Robin Hood gang on the sidewalks of New York. I did. They don't love the Big Town as I do. So I'm privileged to talk angrily of those who've run it into the ground and bankruptcy.

I've rolled for hours in unmarked police cars listening to the "squawk boxes" (two-way radios). I know of a riot in a ghetto where teenagers were terrorizing their elders and heaving rocks at uniformed cops and detectives. Those missiles drew blood. Some of the police went for the rockthrowers. The cops' superior officers blocked the cops. Knock it off. Go home. Don't touch those kids. Don't rock the boat. That's orders from headquarters.

Headquarters wasn't the police commissioner. It was City Hall. And City Hall at that time was a presidential campaign center for hizzoner the mayor, John V. Lindsay, who appeared not to want to alienate the proletariat. The cops figuratively were handcuffed during many riots, demonstrations and arrests. So the city ran scrared. Corporations and the citizenry, black, white and Puerto Rican, ran for the suburbs.

Big companies ran to Houston. Some to nearby Connecticut. Like Texaco, which is evacuating 20 of its 35 floors in the Chrysler Building - moving 1700 of its 2200 employes to Westchester. Out went the big firms. Down went the tax base.

And I'm convinced that an accurate General Accounting Office audit of the actual work time put in by scores of thousands of civil servants would show that with vacations they average perhaps six or seven months a year for a full year's pay.

There's the matter, for example, of the social service case aides. Their union contract grants them half a week's work for a full week's wages if they take college classes 10 hours a week. Even with the classes this gives them 10 hours for nothing on what should be a 40-hour week.

Just ask the American Arbitration Association about this one. Some of these social workers sought to set a pattern by filing a grievance because they weren't getting an additional paid lunch hour every day. This would have given them 45 hours pay for working 20 and going to college for 10 hours.

And one recent day, despite the desperate financial crunch, tens of thousands of civil service desks were un-personned. Disaster alert? No. It was paycheck-cashing time. Supposedly 15 minutes. Runs into a half hour. And it comes between two coffee breaks.

As for the school system -- regular and higher education -- these tuition-free institutions, the Board of Education and the City University of New York employ well over 100,000 persons. Check their work year. Let me know if it comes to more than what would be an ordinary six months' stint each year for a full year's pay. I'll wager it won't.

As for the sanitation department workers mentioned by President Ford, just put the same yard rule to them. Count their actual hours worked. See how much of the paid year they goof off. Not all. But enough to slash "productivity" and leave the garbage elephant-eye high in many streets.

Generally these street cleaners are a surly lot. Some years ago when their president, John DeLury, Nelson Rockefeller's close friend and political ally, tried to sign a routine contract, the membership nailed him in City Hall square, pelted him with rotten eggs and bounced him once or twice. So now the "sanitation" men's contract gives them a basic $15,000 yearly plus some $7,500 a year in fringes. Total cost to the city is $22,500 annually according to Persident Ford. And unlimited sick leave. Also one month's vacation after one year seniority.

And then there are the semi-skilled intellectuals who moan for the city's prisoners. Do you know that until recently inmates had the privilege of sending holiday, birthday, and other happy talk telegrams free of sharge to the outside? Candygrams, too. Which they charged to the prison and some of its correction department officials?

And until this column campaigned the welfare department out of the welfare-hotel practice, the city paid as much as $2,000 a month to house some of its allegedly "homeless" clients -- and in some of the best hotels at that.

Multiply all this by thousands of other practices – and don't forget the physical threats to supervisors on the night shift if the latter attempt to report massive goofing off. All this costs New York hundreds of millions a year.

And then there are the civil service pension funds for which the city picks up the bill. No one really knows how much this costs. I consulted one top banking official and he estimates the accumulation of teachers' and other pension funds at well over $12 billion.

Such largesse everywhere has forced some retrenchment. Let's not forget Mickey Maye's firefighting union members. Their ranks have been cut from 11,800 to 8,800. Now some 65 per cent of those retiring throw in their papers because of disability. And Maye told the President the other day that if winter comes, increasing fire deaths of the citizenry surely won't be far behind.

No city can live so high on the hog and survive. No city can be the wind tunnel to the White House for ambitious politicians and survive.

We used to sing New York, New York, it's a wonderful town. It was. It can still save itself. But unless its employes put in a full year's work for a full year's pay, its budget will go to $20 billion a year, Abe Beame once told me. Even the nation couldn't survive much more of that.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Navy Neglects
Emergency Carriers
LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — In these uneasy times, the Navy may be alerted any day to airlift endangered Americans from some trouble spot. Yet the seven helicopter carriers, which are most likely to be used for an evacuation, have been permitted to fall into woeful disrepair.

The Navy seems able to find funds when an Admiral wants his quarters refitted or an ex-Admiral applies for a contract as a consultant. Yet there isn't enough money, apparently, to maintain the rusty, leaky tubs which are supposed to be ready for any emergency. The Navy crewmen and Marine assault troops on board also often live in squalor.

We began investigating conditions aboard the helicopter carriers a year ago. But the Navy, we found, had swept the embarrassing facts under the secrecy stamp. Not that there is anything legitimately secret about the Navy's neglect. It is merely a Pentagon habit to censor embarrassing news by classifying it.

We were able, nevertheless, to get the classified inspection reports, and on Nov. 11, 1974, we described the deplorable conditions aboard the Okinawa and, later, the Iwo Jima. The other five helicopter carriers, we suggested, weren't in much better shape.

Suddenly, three astonishing things happened: (1) the Navy began allotting money to repair the Iwo Jima and Okinawa; (2) we are flooded with letters from sailors urging us to write about their own unseaworthy ships; and (3) the Navy brass stamped an even higher classification on the reports of its jaunty chief inspector, Rear Adm. John Bulkeley.

At one closed meeting, the participants were advised that the newer classification and special security precautions were necessary to "keep the reports out of Jack Anderson's hands."

Despite the coverup, however, we have obtained copies of the latest inspection reports. One lengthy report describes conditions aboard the New Orleans.

Some vital electronic gear was installed on this helicopter carrier more than 18 months ago. Yet Bulkeley's boys found that "complete documentation is still not aboard ship." The "documentation" is needed to properly operate the equipment.

"The passive electronic warfare capability" for gathering seaborne intelligence and other information "is degraded," the report charges. Even the "jib cranes," used to lift small boats and supplies onto the deck, "are in a deteriorated condition with one out of commission," the report adds.

The Navy, in response to our inquiry, insisted it is doing everything possible to keep up the fleet.

Footnote: At the very time we were writing this story, another letter arrived from the mother of a seaman aboard the New Orleans' sister ship, the Inchon. She urged us to keep reporting on the fleet's condition. Her son's ship, she wrote, "is now two years past its yard period and has had innumberable breakdowns."

UNFAIR TO BLACKS: The oil companies have been patting themselves on the backs and boasting what good citizens they are for throwing contracts to black businessmen.

The oil crowd staged a "minority procurement fair" in Houston, for example, to dramatize how generous they are to blacks. But privately, some blacks called it the "minority procurement unfair."

For when it comes right down to it, most of the minority subcontracts handed out by the oil industry are for janitorial or other menial services. The big money is held tightly within what one black entrepreneur called the inner circle of "good ol' boys."

The industry claims, as part of its ballyhoo, that it awarded $200 million worth of business to minority firms last year on the Alaskan North Slope project alone. This is astonishing since the nation's top 100 black firms, all together, achieved little more than $200 million in total sales last year.

But perhaps a case study is more revealing. Mark Rivers is a West Point graduate and accomplished businessman who helped make the Watts Manufacturing Company the top black-owned manufacturing firm in the nation.

Early this year, he put together a firm called California Energy Systems. No one questions that Rivers' new company is competent. It can design, engineer, fabricate and deliver the equipment needed to drill for offshore oil and gas. Yet after six frustrating months, his firm has yet to come up with a single significant contract.

Rivers called upon Exxon, the oil colossus, a total of 17 times. Each time, he was given a sympathetic audience but no contract. When he related his experience to Wilbur Hunt, the Exxon represenattive at the Houston procurement fair, he was told he should have made an 18th visit.

Rivers had a worse time with British Petroleum, which put him on the bid list. But just as his firm came up for a contract, it was abruptly taken off the list, and the contract went to a different company.

A source inside BP-s contracting company told us that the president of BP's U.S. operations, Tom Sharpe, personally ordered Rivers' company removed from the bid list after a meeting with Rivers.

Since BP operates on American soil in Alaska, it is required by the Interior Department to do some minority contracting. But our sources clain that most of BP's minority business goes to "front" operations. A minority businessman is simply used for window dressing, in other words, with the real profits going to non-minority controllers.

Rivers also got the runaround from Occidental. Now Gulf and Mobil have agreed to inspect his facilities. It remains to be seen, however, whether they will put their money where their mouths are.

Footnote: A BP spokesman denied that Rivers' firm was ordered off the bid list by Sharpe. He said they are still eligible for contracts. He also denied that "fronts" were used to fulfill minority business requirements. Exxon and Occidental spokesmen defended their firms' minority business records, and indicated that Rivers' firm would be given every consideration in the future.

State bar board approves reform

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri Bar Association's board of governors has approved a bar committee's state judicial reform plan after limiting certain provisions concerning Supreme Court powers.

By a 21-3 vote, the board decided to submit the plan for the first time to voters in a 1976 statewide referendum. In previous years, the proposal has failed to get through the legislature.

Approximately 114,000 signatures would be needed to get the proposal on the ballot, said Thomas D. Cochran, state bar association president. The cost would be about $400,000.

The proposals, to be effective in January 1979 if passed, call for the combination of all probate, magistrate and municipal courts into a single circuit court system below the court of appeals.

But the board of governors decided against the committee's suggestions that the Missouri Supreme Court have authority to redistrict circuit court boundary lines.

"The thinking was this was giving too much power to the supreme court for (such) a political decision," said Alexander Bartlett, a committee member. The board opted to keep the existing constitutional rule of legislative redistricting, he said.

The supreme court, however, has authority to transfer judges and create or phase out judgeships under the proposals.

The board further specified which cases will be appealed from the circuit court level directly to the state supreme court, bypassing the state court of appeals.

Those are cases involving trials where punishment imposed is death or imprisonment, trials questioning the validity of Missouri statutes, treaties or the constitution and trials questioning a state official's placement in office.

A controversial part of the plan calls for the appointment of circuit court clerks. Clerks now are elected, but beginning in 1983 circuit court judges would appoint their own clerks under terms of the proposal.

"The circuit courts ought to have control over their clerical personnel," Bartlett said.

Under the MBA plan, probate and magistrate judges would become associate circuit judges under a circuit court judge. MBA committee members say no additional judgeships will be created after 1979 so no additional costs will be incurred.

"There will no doubt be a lot of gnashing of teeth when this is phased in," Bartlett said, "but with the proper administration it should work.

"Under the present system you have everyone working their own ball game," he said. "With the new plan you'll have the circuit judge exercising authority over the circuit and this is where it should become effective."

Under other provisions of the MBA plan:

—All judges in the state would have to be lawyers.

—Police courts will be eliminated.

—A seven-member judicial commission on salary will be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Missouri Senate.

Civil cases on docket

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The November term of U.S. District Court began here Monday, and for the first time only civil cases are on the docket because of a change in court practice.

Earlier this year it was announced that, in order to give defendants a speedy trial, all criminal cases would be tried at the permanent seat of the Eastern District of Missouri in St. Louis.

As a result of this change, only civil cases are now tried when the court sends judges to Cape Girardeau for trial in the months of May and November.

The docket for this term is light. Only one case was scheduled this week and Judge Meredith declined judgment until parties involved filed additional information.

Next week, court will resume on Tuesday with several cases pending. Among them is action brought by Lorado Young and others of Dexter against Clairol, Inc., alleging plaintiffs suffered a bad allergical reaction to a product manufactured by theat company.

Romanian chief unhappy with crowds

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The royal palace isn't palatial enough for Nicolae Ceaucescu, chief of state of Romania.

The Communist leader also is unhappy because the crowds aren't large enough and don't cheer loudly enough, according to sources handling arrangements for the Romanian's state visit to Portugal.

A butler at the 17th century palace said he had been told to take off his shoes so he wouldn't disturb the visiting Romanians.

"Classless society? Humph!," the butler snorted. "I waited on Queen Elizabeth in 1958 and she never made me go around in stocking feet."

Civil cases on docket

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The November term of U.S. District Court began here Monday, and for the first time only civil cases are on the docket because of a change in court practice.

Earlier this year it was announced that, in order to give defendants a speedy trial, all criminal cases would be tried at the permanent seat of the Eastern District of Missouri in St. Louis.

As a result of this change, only civil cases are now tried when the court sends judges to Cape Girardeau for trial in the months of May and November.

The docket for this term is light. Only one case was scheduled this week and Judge Meredith declined judgment until parties involved filed additional information.

Next week, court will resume on Tuesday with several cases pending. Among them is action brought by Lorado Young and others of Dexter against Clairol, Inc., alleging plaintiffs suffered a bad allergical reaction to a product manufactured by theat company.

Romanian chief unhappy with crowds

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The royal palace isn't palatial enough for Nicolae Ceaucescu, chief of state of Romania.

The Communist leader also is unhappy because the crowds aren't large enough and don't cheer loudly enough, according to sources handling arrangements for the Romanian's state visit to Portugal.

A butler at the 17th century palace said he had been told to take off his shoes so he wouldn't disturb the visiting Romanians.

"Classless society? Humph!," the butler snorted. "I waited on Queen Elizabeth in 1958 and she never made me go around in stocking feet."

Mickey Gilley has his own success story

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mickey Gilley quickly acknowledges he sounds a lot like Jerry Lee Lewis.

As cousins, the two entertainers grew up together and even helped each other learn to play rockabilly piano in Ferriday, La.

"I'm compared to Jerry Lee all the time," Gilley says. "There's a lot of similarity in our music. We both play a bluesy, honky-tonk piano."

Lewis went on to become an early rock and roll star, developing a reputation as a wild stage performer for his ability to pound pianos to destruction.

Gilley moved to Houston, got a construction job and began playing at local clubs. His style gradually moved towards western swing and country.

Five years ago, he became a partner in what has become one of the largest country music clubs in the nation. Gilley calls it a beer joint, but on weekends there may be between 2,000 and 3,000 people there.

He got a local TV show and his custom-made records sold well at area stores. Over the years, he gradually accustomed himself to being a local celebrity after several efforts at landing a contract with the big record companies failed.

One of the songs Gilley recorded was an old George Morgan hit, "Room Full of Roses." Radio stations in Houston played it and before long it had sold 7,000 copies.

At the same time, Playboy magazine was about ready to give up on its venture into the music industry after losing several million dollars.

Playboy Records signed Gilley as its first and, at the time, possibly its last country artist. "Room Full of Roses" became the top country song in the nation and Playboy executives, seeing a trend, turned their record company towards country.

With a drop in its magazine and club revenues, the recording arm has become a major profit maker for Playboy.

Gilley takes pride in the turnaround.

"Let's face it," he said. "It just doesn't happen unless you're with one of the big companies. And, new companies, they just don't make it."

Sheriff finds housing for overflow

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Sheriff Raymond Percich found appropriate housing for 15 overflow city jail prisoners last night without having to take them to a luxury hotel.

Percich said three prisoners who could not be fitted into the city jail last night were sent to the Andrew County Jail in Savannah, about 330 miles northwest of St. Louis near the Nebraska border.

The other 12, he said, were divided between the city workhouse and the police holdover.

Monday night the sheriff lodged two overflow prisoners in an eighth floor room of the fashionable Chase-Park Plaza Hotel where they smoked cigars, ate lobster dinners and watched Monday night football at a cost to the city of about $200.

Officials said overcrowded conditions at the city jail and the workhouse have made it necessary recently to find housing for city prisoners in jails across the state of Missouri.

New York suppliers uneasy

NEW YORK (AP) — Phones are ringing busily at City Hall with 14,000 suppliers from across the country calling to find out if financially hard-pressed New York will be able to pay for the $500 million worth of goods it has on order.

That doesn't count such capital items as $300 million worth of subway cars being built by the Pullman Co. in St. Louis.

"So far there's no panic, but there's an awful lot of anxiety," said a spokesman for the Municipal Services Administration.

Among the most anxious was Dave Koeppel of Airport Motors in the New York City borough of Queens. Koeppel has 25 Plymouth police cars on his lot waiting for delivery to the city and is unsure what to do since, he says, the city already owes him $1.5 million. The contract is worth $6 million a year.

"If we don't get paid, the car people in Michigan don't get paid and the glass people in Pittsburgh don't get paid and the tire people in Akron don't get paid and so forth," Koeppel said.

"But we got faith. We got faith the money will come from somewhere, because if it doesn't, an awful lot of people in an awful lot of towns are going to suffer."

Koeppel said this shipment at least will go through and added he's already used his own money to pay for them.

Thomas Cecil, president of Swift & Co. in Chicago, telephoned purchasing commissioner Robert I. Cohen the other day dunning him for a $605,000 unpaid food bill. Cohen said Cecil told him if the city doesn't pay the company would have to close a section employing 110 men, the largest single loss in the history of the meat packing firm.

"This thing is national in scope," Cohen said in an interview. "And it works two ways. If we can't pay the bills, they're not going to deliver. What are we going to do for water if we can't pay for the chemicals to purify it?"

The national scope of unpaid New York City bills was a major theme of a speech Mayor Abraham D. Beame prepared for the National Press Club in Washington today.

The city, meanwhile, is entering into no new contracts except short-term ones for such perishable items as fresh foods.

Truck farmers from as far away as Iowa and Florida were reported among the most insistent callers. Some of them grow produce almost exclusively for the city.

"Some of the smaller firms will go bankrupt if New York City goes bankrupt," Cohen said.

City officials said big firms would not be hurt over-all, but sections devoted mostly to supplying New York would be.

2 men apparently planned disappearance

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Two Mound City men who mysteriously disappeared from their borrowed cabin cruiser near here Oct. 7, apparently plotted the disappearance to get away from their families and responsibilities, authorities disclosed Monday.

Cape Girardeau County Sheriff's Sgt. Frank Smith said he learned that Michael Couts, 25, has been located in Greeley, Colo., where he is working for a heating and sheet metal firm.

His companion, Harold Jordan, 39, has not been located, But Sgt. Smith said Couts told Holt County authorities that Jordan left Cape Girardeau by bus early the morning of Oct. 8, destined for Texarkana, Ark.

Couts was located following an investigation by a Holt County attorney who was hired by Jordan's family to locate Jordan.

Couts has admitted that he intended to disappear when he and Jordan, his employer, left Mound City Oct. 3, in the boat allegedly on a fishing trip along the Missouri River to St. Louis, where they were to turn around and return home.

Sgt. Smith said Couts apparently talked Jordan into disappearing with him after they had left Mound City, which is near Kansas City.

The cabin cruiser was found adrift in the Mississippi River near Gray's Point by Army Corps of Engineers dredge workers about midnight Oct. 7. The pair was last seen that afternoon at the Cape Girardeau riverfront before they reportedly went to eat at a restaurant.

Sgt. Smith said Couts related that Jordan pulled the plug out of the boat in an effort to sink it and that the pair spent the night in an unidentified Cape Girardeau motel under assumed names.

It was not learned how Couts left Cape Girardeau. Friends of Jordan in Yuma, Ariz., received a telephone call from him recently, but they did not talk with him because they were not at home when the call was placed, Sgt. Smith said.

Couts was divorced from his wife about a year ago and she reportedly recently filed non-support complaints against him, it was learned.

Sgt. Smith said Couts was in touch with a Kansas City news reporter who talked with him over the telephone and that Couts confirmed the same story he told the newsman with Holt County authorities.

Sgt. Smith said he will attempt to determine which motel the pair stayed at and whether Jordan left Cape Girardeau safely. He said if he did, little more could be done here.

He said the possibility of any charges being filed against the pair here in connection with the attempted sinking of the boat would likely require complaints from the owner, Jeffrey Anderson of Independence, who has said he wishes to drop the matter.

Couts and Jordan were the subjects of a missing persons search for several days after the boat was discovered adrift partially filled with water. The boat was returned home by Anderson.

Attendance attitudes changing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent drops in college entrance examination scores may reflect high school students' more relaxed attitudes about attending college, says the president of the Educational Testing Service.

"It's no longer true that if you're in the top quarter of your class, you think you have to go to college," William W. Turnbull said Wednesday.

He added that a national preoccupation with students' test scores is on the wane. ETS, of Princeton, N.J., administers the college entrance exam and other tests.

Speaking to a group of reporters at a Washington Journalism Center seminar, Turnbull said many high school students are more willing to question their parents' values and concerns with higher education than were students of the early 1960s.

"I would speculate that in the early 1960s, there was a greater acceptance on the part of young people that one worked hard and tried to make it in the system," Turnbull said. "That acceptance of the adult middle-class value system has been eroding since the 1960s."

Today's students are "more willing to abandon parental values and experiment with values of their own choosing," he said.

Another reason why many students are more relaxed about getting into college is that there are more colleges now, Turnbull said.

"I attribute this to a rise in community colleges. Kids today know they can get into the smaller colleges.

2 men apparently planned disappearance

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Two Mound City men who mysteriously disappeared from their borrowed cabin cruiser near here Oct. 7, apparently plotted the disappearance to get away from their families and responsibilities, authorities disclosed Monday.

Cape Girardeau County Sheriff's Sgt. Frank Smith said he learned that Michael Couts, 25, has been located in Greeley, Colo., where he is working for a heating and sheet metal firm.

His companion, Harold Jordan, 39, has not been located, But Sgt. Smith said Couts told Holt County authorities that Jordan left Cape Girardeau by bus early the morning of Oct. 8, destined for Texarkana, Ark.

Couts was located following an investigation by a Holt County attorney who was hired by Jordan's family to locate Jordan.

Couts has admitted that he intended to disappear when he and Jordan, his employer, left Mound City Oct. 3, in the boat allegedly on a fishing trip along the Missouri River to St. Louis, where they were to turn around and return home.

Sgt. Smith said Couts apparently talked Jordan into disappearing with him after they had left Mound City, which is near Kansas City.

The cabin cruiser was found adrift in the Mississippi River near Gray's Point by Army Corps of Engineers dredge workers about midnight Oct. 7. The pair was last seen that afternoon at the Cape Girardeau riverfront before they reportedly went to eat at a restaurant.

Remarriages on the rise

By MARY JO HERDE
Area child & family development specialist

The number of remarriages in the later years of life has increased and is continuing to grow. Second marriages and late marriages are becoming more acceptable to society, as the number of widows and widowers increases. In 1970, there were over six million widows and a million and a half widowers in the United States. This is six times as many widows and four times as many widowers as there were in 1900.

The trend toward remarriage is aided by better health among individuals over 60. Good health helps these senior citizens to remain mobile and active and the possibility of meeting a marriage partner increases. Life expectancy is now longer than it has been in the past. And, many older Americans don't welcome the prospect of passing 15 or 20 years alone.

Living with one's children is decreasing in popularity. In today's mobile society, children may live half way across the nation from their parents. An uprooting from home and old friends may be very difficult to some older Americans. Inclusion of an additional family member in a young family is sometimes difficult.

However, research shows that an older person who decides to remarry may face opposition from family and friends. Children often oppose a later-life marriage because they see it as a reflection of their inability to meet the parent's needs. They may feel guilty about their own failure to make up to their parents for the happiness they had as children. Sometimes, the sudden role reversal, of accepting the parent as a needing person with desires and plans beyond themselves, is difficult for the child to deal with. Sometimes a child may oppose the marriage because of self interests; he may feel that remarriage of the parent will adversely affect his inheritance. Often, strong opposition from children and friends will discourage the senior citizen about the prospect of remarrying.

Older remarriages can be successful. Walter McCain (1969), in research conducted with 100 couples who married late in life, found that certain factors seemed to aid in increasing the chances for a successful marriage. Widows and widowers who knew each other-well and who seemed to satisfactorily adapt to the process of aging before remarriage tended to be more successful. Sufficient incomes coupled with ownership of a house(s) in which they did not live, was often seen in successful remarriages. And, approval of family and friends of the remarriage was also seen in many of the marriages classified as successful.

Although the number of senior citizen marriages in this area is small, this may increase as more people seek a continuation of family life. In America's fast-paced society, remarriage may be the sway to intimacy and caring in the later years.

Sirloin drops 10 cents

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Following a slight decline at the wholesale level, retail beef prices dropped off this week, according to the weekly marketbasket survey by the Missouri Farm Bureau.

But retail pork prices rose for all cuts despite a sharp drop on the wholesale price of some portions, the survey of selected food items in 50 grocery stores across the state showed.

Leading the decline in beef prices were T-bone and sirloin steak, which both dropped 10 cents a pound to $2.21 and $1.92 respectively.

Blade roast was off eight cents to 95 cents a pound, rib steak was down a nickel to $1.82 a pound and arm roast was two cents lower at $1.32 a pound.

Ground beef remained steady at 81 cents a pound and round steak recorded a three cent increase to $1.69 a pound.

Center cut pork chops led the rise in pork prices, climbing six cents to $2.03 a pound. Pork blade roast was up four cents a pound to $1.44, and both shank and butt portions of ham rose two cents to $123 and $1.37 a pound respectively.

Pork steak was up a penny to $1.54.

Chicken remained steady with whole fryers at 56 cents a pound and cut up parts at 63 cents a pound.

A gallon of milk dropped slightly with both whole milk at $1.51 and 2 per cent at $1.44 down a penny each.

A dozen grade A eggs were slightly higher with extral large at 76 cents and large at 73 cents both up a penny and medium steady at 67 cents.

While a 1 1-2 pound loaf of white bread rose a nickel to 62 cents, 10 pounds of red potatoes were down nine cents to $1.38 and five pounds of cane sugar was down a penny to $1.46.

Woman dogcatcher takes job no one else wanted

PECATONICA, Ill. (AP) — Twice a day Virginia Cash puts her young son in the backseat carrier of her bike, shoulders a lasso and pedals around town looking for stray dogs.

She has caught 80 since becoming the official dogcatcher last spring in this northwestern Illinois community of 1,800 population.

"Dogs were dumping over my garbage cans two or three times a day and I went to the mayor to complain," says the 28-year-old wife of a truck driver. "When I left the mayor's office I was the town's dogcatcher. He gave me the keys to the pound, an arrest book and his blessings."

Mrs. Cash says most of the dogs she snares have tags but their owners ignore the law and let them run loose.

"When I run them down, I call up the owner to come get them," she said. "I charge $5 for the first time I pick up a dog, $10 for the second time I nab him and on up to $25 for the fifth time. Strays without tags I try to follow home. I yell at them: 'Go home! Go home!' and they usually do. I follow on my bike. Sometimes I follow them to farms 10 miles or so out of town."

She uses the lasso, or choker chain, on stubborn dogs, then walks them—and the bike—to the pound.

"People who spot strays telephone me," she said. "I can get to the farther part of town in 10 minutes. I've never been bitten. Taking 2½-year-old Ronnie with me serves two purposes. I don't have to pay a babysitter and dogs and children seem to have a natural affinity. With him perched in the carrier, dogs seem to come around more."

Mrs. Cash says in the first two months she was making enough money to supplement the family's food bill. "But now I've got almost everybody in town keeping their dogs on a leash or fenced in and I've picked up only one dog in the last month."

The village pays her a monthly minumum of $10 so she is assured of something even if she doesn't get a dog. She has no uniform; she wears slacks on her excursions.

"The money isn't much but I enjoy the exercise, and everywhere I go the kids wave and shout: 'Hi, dogcatcher,'" she said. "I learned to bike in the London area. My dad, a staff sergeant in the Air Force, was stationed there two years and we biked everywhere."

Ann Landers

Reader desires respite from Ann's sex columns

Dear Ann Landers: Many of your readers in their 60s and 70s have been neutered by time. We tend to look back at the grotesqueries of sex with mild amazement. As the Bible says, "There's a season for everything," and certainly there's a season for the flesh. When we were young and lusty who would have had it otherwise?

But your column seems to deal too frequently with sex problems that no longer have meaning to us.

Please, Ann, give us older fans a respite from the domestic satyrs, the impotent, the gays, the truck-drivers who wear panty girdles and the Funny Uncles. I promise you won't lose a reader.

Want to open a wasp's nest? As a suggested topic, why not ask how many professional men who were put through college by their wives, supported through their doctorates by a woman laboring at a boring job, kept THEIR promise to let HER go back to college when their education was completed so that she might have her turn.

I know many physicians, dentists, lawyers, professors and engineers whose wives put them through school and now they don't seem to fit into their husband's lives. They are too dull – don't speak the same language, etc. How about it, Ann? -- Grumpwitch In Atlanta

Dear Grump: First, sorry you've been "neutered by time." If you hadn't skipped over those letters on sex, you'd know that time needn't "neuter" anybody. But that's another subject.

O.K. I'll ask the question you want answered. How many women who put their husbands through professional school now feel left behind socially and intellectually? Are you sorry you made the sacrifice? Let's her from those who did it.

Dear Ann Landers: The other day in your column there was a letter from S.L.P., whose neighbor "opened yer yap" and told her 11-year-old daughter she was adopted. Now all the kid does is mope around. The adopted girl is depressed. She feels her adoptive parents did a terrible thing by not telling her.

I agree they should have told her. But what's done is done. Maybe I, also an adopted child, can help cheer that girl up.

Being adopted is a beautiful thing. You've got a family that cares. You have a chance to get a good education. You were chosen and didn't just "happen." If you are still upset because your mom didn't tell you you were adopted, why not, instead of being mad, talk to her and ask her why she kept it from you? Moping around and being miserable won't help.

I'm 15 and have many friends who were adopted. Not one of us is complaining. So get with it. We are the lucky ones. -Val

Dear V.: Bravo, girl! Thanks for sitting in my chair today!

Dear Ann Landers: You've probably had it up to here with arguments both pro and con from housewives who think they've earned the title "Domestic Engineer." I hope you can find room for one more letter, Ann.

The Greeks had a word for it and Mr .Webster HAS a word for it. The word is serene, dignified and aristocratic. It's "Oikologist." Definition: "housekeeper or housewife."

No foolin', Ann. Look in one of the big dictionaries and you'll find it. -- Savannah Sleuth

Dear Savvy: How big does the dictionary have to be? I looked in two enormous, unabridged tomes and was unable to find the word. I have a hunch your "big" dictionary came from a bookstore in Athens.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

If a cake recipe calls for sifted flour, sift the flour yourself even though the flour bag is marked "presifted."

Remarriages on the rise

By MARY JO HERDE
Area child & family development specialist

The number of remarriages in the later years of life has increased and is continuing to grow. Second marriages and late marriages are becoming more acceptable to society, as the number of widows and widowers increases. In 1970, there were over six million widows and a million and a half widowers in the United States. This is six times as many widows and four times as many widowers as there were in 1900.

The trend toward remarriage is aided by better health among individuals over 60. Good health helps these senior citizens to remain mobile and active and the possibility of meeting a marriage partner increases. Life expectancy is now longer than it has been in the past. And, many older Americans don't welcome the prospect of passing 15 or 20 years alone.

Living with one's children is decreasing in popularity. In today's mobile society, children may live half way across the nation from their parents. An uprooting from home and old friends may be very difficult to some older Americans. Inclusion of an additional family member in a young family is sometimes difficult.

However, research shows that an older person who decides to remarry may face opposition from family and friends. Children often oppose a later-life marriage because they see it as a reflection of their inability to meet the parent's needs. They may feel guilty about their own failure to make up to their parents for the happiness they had as children. Sometimes, the sudden role reversal, of accepting the parent as a needing person with desires and plans beyond themselves, is difficult for the child to deal with. Sometimes a child may oppose the marriage because of self interests; he may feel that remarriage of the parent will adversely affect his inheritance. Often, strong opposition from children and friends will discourage the senior citizen about the prospect of remarrying.

Older remarriages can be successful. Walter McCain (1969), in research conducted with 100 couples who married late in life, found that certain factors seemed to aid in increasing the chances for a successful marriage. Widows and widowers who knew each other well and who seemed to satisfactorily adapt to the process of aging before remarriage tended to be more successful. Sufficient incomes coupled with ownership of a house(s) in which they did not live, was often seen in successful remarriages. And, approval of family and friends of the remarriage was also seen in many of the marriages classified as successful.

Although the number of senior citizen marriages in this area is small, this may increase as more people seek a continuation of family life. In America's fast-paced society, remarriage may be the sway to intimacy and caring in the later years.

Sirloin drops 10 cents

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Following a slight decline at the wholesale level, retail beef prices dropped off this week, according to the weekly marketbasket survey by the Missouri Farm Bureau.

But retail pork prices rose for all cuts despite a sharp drop on the wholesale price of some portions, the survey of selected food items in 50 grocery stores across the state showed.

Leading the decline in beef prices were T-bone and sirloin steak, which both dropped 10 cents a pound to $2.21 and $1.92 respectively.

Blade roast was off eight cents to 95 cents a pound, rib steak was down a nickel to $1.82 a pound and arm roast was two cents lower at $1.32 a pound.

Ground beef remained steady at 81 cents a pound and round steak recorded a three cent increase to $1.69 a pound.

Center cut pork chops led the rise in pork prices, climbing six cents to $2.03 a pound. Pork blade roast was up four cents a pound to $1.44, and both shank and butt portions of ham rose two cents to $123 and $1.37 a pound respectively.

Pork steak was up a penny to $1.54.

Chicken remained steady with whole fryers at 56 cents a pound and cut up parts at 63 cents a pound.

A gallon of milk dropped slightly with both whole milk at $1.51 and 2 per cent at $1.44 down a penny each.

A dozen grade A eggs were slightly higher with extral large at 76 cents and large at 73 cents both up a penny and medium steady at 67 cents.

While a 1 1-2 pound loaf of white bread rose a nickel to 62 cents, 10 pounds of red potatoes were down nine cents to $1.38 and five pounds of cane sugar was down a penny to $1.46.

Woman dogcatcher takes job no one else wanted

PECATONICA, Ill. (AP) — Twice a day Virginia Cash puts her young son in the backseat carrier of her bike, shoulders a lasso and pedals around town looking for stray dogs.

She has caught 80 since becoming the official dogcatcher last spring in this northwestern Illinois community of 1,800 population.

"Dogs were dumping over my garbage cans two or three times a day and I went to the mayor to complain," says the 28-year-old wife of a truck driver. "When I left the mayor's office I was the town's dogcatcher. He gave me the keys to the pound, an arrest book and his blessings."

Mrs. Cash says most of the dogs she snares have tags but their owners ignore the law and let them run loose.

"When I run them down, I call up the owner to come get them," she said. "I charge $5 for the first time I pick up a dog, $10 for the second time I nab him and on up to $25 for the fifth time. Strays without tags I try to follow home. I yell at them: 'Go home! Go home!' and they usually do. I follow on my bike. Sometimes I follow them to farms 10 miles or so out of town."

She uses the lasso, or choker chain, on stubborn dogs, then walks them—and the bike—to the pound.

"People who spot strays telephone me," she said. "I can get to the farther part of town in 10 minutes. I've never been bitten. Taking 2½-year-old Ronnie with me serves two purposes. I don't have to pay a babysitter and dogs and children seem to have a natural affinity. With him perched in the carrier, dogs seem to come around more."

Mrs. Cash says in the first two months she was making enough money to supplement the family's food bill. "But now I've got almost everybody in town keeping their dogs on a leash or fenced in and I've picked up only one dog in the last month."

The village pays her a monthly minumum of $10 so she is assured of something even if she doesn't get a dog. She has no uniform; she wears slacks on her excursions.

"The money isn't much but I enjoy the exercise, and everywhere I go the kids wave and shout: 'Hi, dogcatcher,'" she said. "I learned to bike in the London area. My dad, a staff sergeant in the Air Force, was stationed there two years and we biked everywhere."

Ann Landers

Reader desires respite from Ann's sex columns

Dear Ann Landers: Many of your readers in their 60s and 70s have been neutered by time. We tend to look back at the grotesqueries of sex with mild amazement. As the Bible says, "There's a season for everything," and certainly there's a season for the flesh. When we were young and lusty who would have had it otherwise?

But your column seems to deal too frequently with sex problems that no longer have meaning to us.

Please, Ann, give us older fans a respite from the domestic satyrs, the impotent, the gays, the truck-drivers who wear panty girdles and the Funny Uncles. I promise you won't lose a reader.

Want to open a wasp's nest? As a suggested topic, why not ask how many professional men who were put through college by their wives, supported through their doctorates by a woman laboring at a boring job, kept THEIR promise to let HER go back to college when their education was completed so that she might have her turn.

I know many physicians, dentists, lawyers, professors and engineers whose wives put them through school and now they don't seem to fit into their husband's lives. They are too dull – don't speak the same language, etc. How about it, Ann? -- Grumpwitch In Atlanta

Dear Grump: First, sorry you've been "neutered by time."If you hadn't skipped over those letters on sex, you'd know that time needn't "neuter" anybody. But that's another subject.

O.K. I'll ask the question you want answered. How many women who put their husbands through professional school now feel left behind socially and intellectually? Are you sorry you made the sacrifice? Let's her from those who did it.

Dear Ann Landers: The other day in your column there was a letter from S.L.P., whose neighbor "opened yer yap" and told her 11-year-old daughter she was adopted. Now all the kid does is mope around. The adopted girl is depressed. She feels her adoptive parents did a terrible thing by not telling her.

I agree they should have told her. But what's done is done. Maybe I, also an adopted child, can help cheer that girl up.

Being adopted is a beautiful thing. You've got a family that cares. You have a chance to get a good education. You were chosen and didn't just "happen." If you are still upset because your mom didn't tell you you were adopted, why not, instead of being mad, talk to her and ask her why she kept it from you? Moping around and being miserable won't help.

I'm 15 and have many friends who were adopted. Not one of us is complaining. So get with it. We are the lucky ones. -Val

Dear V.: Bravo, girl! Thanks for sitting in my chair today!

Dear Ann Landers: You've probably had it up to here with arguments both pro and con from housewives who think they've earned the title "Domestic Engineer." I hope you can find room for one more letter, Ann.

The Greeks had a word for it and Mr .Webster HAS a word for it. The word is serene, dignified and aristocratic. It's "Oikologist." Definition: "housekeeper or housewife."

No foolin', Ann. Look in one of the big dictionaries and you'll find it. -- Savannah Sleuth

Dear Savvy: How big does the dictionary have to be? I looked in two enormous, unabridged tomes and was unable to find the word. I have a hunch your "big" dictionary came from a bookstore in Athens.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

If a cake recipe calls for sifted flour, sift the flour yourself even though the flour bag is marked "presifted."

They're Toddling Out in Style

MOM'S NOT THE ONLY ONE who dresses with fashion flare. There's the youngest member of the family, left, going to bed in flame-retardant stretch terry coveralls—with a matching terry robe to slip on for breakfast. Toddler son wears flared pants in cotton corduroy, printed with cowboy musicians. It's the layered, and coordinated, look — more cowboy musicians appear on the sleeveless vest worn over a turtleneck sweater. And the sisters are Bicentennial belles, in charming pinafore dresses framed with ruffled eyelet lace, all in machine wash-and-wear polyester and cotton. (Terry coveralls by Trimfit. Whitmore 'Becomes' Truman in Film

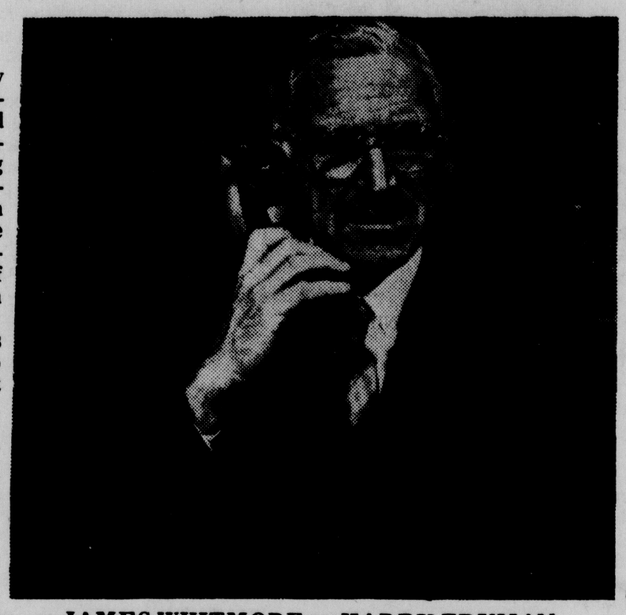
By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Truman has never been so popular. In fact, Truman, who died in 1972, is shaping up as a major hero of 1975 to fans ranging from the young who don't remember him, who perceive him as a figure from a past, more honest time, to President Gerald Ford, who has a portrait of him in the Cabinet Room and a bust of him in the Oval Office.

One of Truman's admirers is actor James Whitmore, 55, who plays Truman in a movie shot of his one-man stage show, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry."

Whitmore's appreciation for Truman came a couple of years after the 1948 election, from a series of articles John Hersey did for the New Yorker magazine. "When Truman was first President I wasn't terribly impressed with him, his public utterances. We'd been spoiled, if that's the word, by FDR. He opened his mouth and that great voice came out with Robert Sherwood's great lines; he was the confidant of Churchill; got us through the Depression and the war; he really filled a tremendous amount of space. Truman came on stage and I couldn't see him.

"John Hersey spent a week with Truman. He was overwhelmed by him; how erudite he was; how cultured he was; his knowledge of history. The image had been a cheap ward-heeler politician from Kansas City. I read every one of those articles. It was the turning point for me with Truman."



JAMES WHITMORE as HARRY TRUMAN

Whitmore had done one one-man show before, in which he portrayed Will Rogers. When it was first suggested that he play Truman in a one-man show, his wife, actress Audra Lindley, usually encouraging, told Whitmore she thought he looked too different from Truman facially to be able to do it. "I kept saying, 'You're absolutely right,' but way deep down I had a feeling I could do it.

"My hair is very curly, in ringlets if I let it go, stiff, red-brown-gray. Now it's straight and gray, by the wonders of hair-dressing. That's all we did, too, whiten the hair, add the glasses and wardrobe.

"I think audiences are very forgiving. They want to go along with it. If you're not trying to be sleight of hand or cheating, you can just point to a place on the stage and say to an audience, 'There's a chair,' and why would they resist it?"

It didn't worry him to play a recent U.S. President, he says. "As an actor we'll play anybody. But I was thinking, will they accept it? Many people still think Eisenhower was a great President, MacArthur was a terrific guy; and, myself included, Adlai was quite a gentleman. I wondered what kind of response I'd get from an audience when Truman takes off on those people.

"I didn't get a complaint, not one. I got one letter I would have to call a crank letter about MacArthur. Every now and then in a theater I would sense in the audience, when I would bring up the name of one or another of those men, little pockets of resistance. Sometimes I'd even hear, 'Tut, tut,' but never did I have any real disturbances or booing. I must say it surprised me."

Whitmore did "Give 'Em Hell, Harry," on stages in Lambertville and Hershey, Pa., Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Tulsa, Memphis, Washington, Kansas City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle — where the film was made.

His career has been mostly acting in movies since "Battleground" in 1949 but he says if he had his way, he'd work on the stage for the rest of his life.

Now that he has received some acclaim doing Will Rogers and Harry Truman, he's going to form a company, One Man Shows, and do some more. "We're talking about Teddy Roosevelt, maybe Jefferson. We kind of mention them without knowing if there's enough material there to make an evening in the theater that would be entertaining. Reciting the Declaration of Independence — I'm not going to do that in the theater. I'd like to do H.L. Mencken; I'm a great Mencken fan. We've got so many Americans that were important and wise."

Asked if his desire on going to Hollywood after Marine Corps service in World War II was to become a star, Whitmore laughs and says, "I wanted to be a good actor.

"I had been in the Actors Studio in New York in its inception. We all felt to a rather ponderous degree that life was real and acting was earnest. Stardom never entered my head. We started a group out ir California immediately, Richard Boone and myself and a bunch of other grads of the Actors Studio, and we immediately started a production of 'Peer Gynt.'

"We rehearsed it for two years. I'm not kidding. We had music composed for it, a cast of thousands, choreography. We finally did it at UCLA. I played Peer. Boone directed. We were playing it so intimately and honestly the audience couldn't hear anything we said. Charles Laughton, at the end of the first act, huffed up the aisle and said, 'I've never been so insulted in my life.'

"We did, I think, four performances. There was not a particular clamor to continue it. Oh, heavens to Betsy, stardom was something to be avoided."

Stamps In The News

Ambitious and somewhat complicated plans are in the works by the U.S. Postal Service to provide several cancellation services during the upcoming joint U.S.-Russian (Apollo-Soyuz) space mission. The cancellation services are in addition to the one mentioned in this column for the two 10-cent stamps which will be issued on the day of the launch at the Kennedy Space Center scheduled for July 15.

The Postal Service will provide pictorial cancellations marking the linkup of the spacecraft scheduled for July 17. The cancellations, depicting the spacecraft, will be applied in Houston and at the Kennedy Space Center. In addition there will be cancellations for the splashdown, now scheduled for July 24.

For collectors who wish to place their orders, here is the chronological listing of cancellation services:

July 15 — first day of issue for the two Apollo-Soyuz commemorative stamps at Kennedy Space Center. The cost is 10 cents per stamp (20 cents for the pair) with remittance in money order. Envelopes should read "Apollo-Soyuz Stamps," Postmaster, Kennedy Space Center, Fla. 32815.

July 17 — Linkup of Apollo-Soyuz spacecraft scheduled. Orders should be addressed to "Linkup Cancel" in care of the Postmaster, Houston, Tex. 77013. Covers submitted must bear first class or airmail stamps.

July 24 — Apollo splashdown is scheduled. Pictorial cancellations will be applied to mail received at San Francisco and Norfolk by this date. They should be addressed to "Splashdown Cancel" in care of the Postmaster at either San Francisco, Calif. 94101 or Norfolk, Va. 23501.

Mail orders for mint U.S. Apollo-Soyuz commemoratives will be filled only by the Philatelic Sales Division. Collectors desiring these mint U.S. stamps should send their orders to "Apollo-Soyuz Stamps," Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265. Remittance must include a 50-cent handling charge in the form of a money order or certified check.

Little Surinam has issued two semipostals to hail the International Women's Year. The commemoratives have a common design that includes the stylized bird emblem of the IWY and features the head of a woman looking upwards into a light panel.

The 15 cents plus 5 bears the legend (in Dutch) Equality, Education and Peace. The 30 c plus 15 has the inscription 1975 Year of the Woman.

Many countries throughout the world, including the U.S., have issued, or soon will issue, stamps honoring the International Women's Year.

It would probably take the wizardry of a magician to accomplish this fact, but some philatelists have requested that the U.S. should issue a stamp honoring the great escape artist Harry Houdini. He was born as Ehrich Weiss at Appleton, Wis., in 1874 but took his name from the famous French magician Jean Houdin for whom France issued a commemorative stamp in 1971. The American magical artist Houdini died Oct. 31, 1926, and the 50th anniversary of his death, say his fond supporters, would be a fitting occasion for a special U.S. stamp.

Blending the old with the new, Antigua has issued five new stamps depicting some of its churches which dot the countryside. Featured are the Lady of the Valley Church, Gilbert Memorial Church, Grace Hill Moravian, St. Phillips Church and Ebenezer Methodist Church. A souvenir sheet will show an altar plus the three high values.

They're Toddling Out in Style

MOM'S NOT THE ONLY ONE who dresses with fashion flare. There's the youngest member of the family, left, going to bed in flame-retardant stretch terry coveralls—with a matching terry robe to slip on for breakfast. Toddler son wears flared pants in cotton corduroy, printed with cowboy musicians. It's the layered, and coordinated, look — more cowboy musicians appear on the sleeveless vest worn over a turtleneck sweater. And the sisters are Bicentennial belles, in charming pinafore dresses framed with ruffled eyelet lace, all in machine wash-and-wear polyester and cotton. (Terry coveralls by Trimfit. Boy's pants from Country Aire in Cone Mills corduroy. Long dresses by Nannette.)

Whitmore 'Becomes' Truman in Film

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Truman has never been so popular. In fact, Truman, who died in 1972, is shaping up as a major hero of 1975 to fans ranging from the young who don't remember him, who perceive him as a figure from a past, more honest time, to President Gerald Ford, who has a portrait of him in the Cabinet Room and a bust of him in the Oval Office.

One of Truman's admirers is actor James Whitmore, 55, who plays Truman in a movie shot of his one-man stage show, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry."

Whitmore's appreciation for Truman came a couple of years after the 1948 election, from a series of articles John Hersey did for the New Yorker magazine. "When Truman was first President I wasn't terribly impressed with him, his public utterances. We'd been spoiled, if that's the word, by FDR. He opened his mouth and that great voice came out with Robert Sherwood's great lines; he was the confidant of Churchill; got us through the Depression and the war; he really filled a tremendous amount of space. Truman came on stage and I couldn't see him.

"John Hersey spent a week with Truman. He was overwhelmed by him; how erudite he was; how cultured he was; his knowledge of history. The image had been a cheap ward-heeler politician from Kansas City. I read every one of those articles. It was the turning point for me with Truman."

JAMES WHITMORE as HARRY TRUMAN

Whitmore had done one one-man show before, in which he portrayed Will Rogers. When it was first suggested that he play Truman in a one-man show, his wife, actress Audra Lindley, usually encouraging, told Whitmore she thought he looked too different from Truman facially to be able to do it. "I kept saying, 'You're absolutely right,' but way deep down I had a feeling I could do it.

"My hair is very curly, in ringlets if I let it go, stiff, red-brown-gray. Now it's straight and gray, by the wonders of hair-dressing. That's all we did, too, whiten the hair, add the glasses and wardrobe.

"I think audiences are very forgiving. They want to go along with it. If you're not trying to be sleight of hand or cheating, you can just point to a place on the stage and say to an audience, 'There's a chair,' and why would they resist it?"

It didn't worry him to play a recent U.S. President, he says. "As an actor we'll play anybody. But I was thinking, will they accept it? Many people still think Eisenhower was a great President, MacArthur was a terrific guy; and, myself included, Adlai was quite a gentleman. I wondered what kind of response I'd get from an audience when Truman takes off on those people.

"I didn't get a complaint, not one. I got one letter I would have to call a crank letter about MacArthur. Every now and then in a theater I would sense in the audience, when I would bring up the name of one or another of those men, little pockets of resistance. Sometimes I'd even hear, 'Tut, tut,' but never did I have any real disturbances or booing. I must say it surprised me."

Whitmore did "Give 'Em Hell, Harry," on stages in Lambertville and Hershey, Pa., Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Tulsa, Memphis, Washington, Kansas City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle — where the film was made.

His career has been mostly acting in movies since "Battleground" in 1949 but he says if he had his way, he'd work on the stage for the rest of his life.

Now that he has received some acclaim doing Will Rogers and Harry Truman, he's going to form a company, One Man Shows, and do some more. "We're talking about Teddy Roosevelt, maybe Jefferson. We kind of mention them without knowing if there's enough material there to make an evening in the theater that would be entertaining. Reciting the Declaration of Independence — I'm not going to do that in the theater. I'd like to do H.L. Mencken; I'm a great Mencken fan. We've got so many Americans that were important and wise."

Asked if his desire on going to Hollywood after Marine Corps service in World War II was to become a star, Whitmore laughs and says, "I wanted to be a good actor.

"I had been in the Actors Studio in New York in its inception. We all felt to a rather ponderous degree that life was real and acting was earnest. Stardom never entered my head. We started a group out in California immediately, Richard Boone and myself and a bunch of other grads of the Actors Studio, and we immediately started a production of 'Peer Gynt.'

"We rehearsed it for two years. I'm not kidding. We had music composed for it, a cast of thousands, choreography. We finally did it at UCLA. I played Peer. Boone directed. We were playing it so intimately and honestly the audience couldn't hear anything we said. Charles Laughton, at the end of the first act, huffed up the aisle and said, 'I've never been so insulted in my life.'

"We did, I think, four performances. There was not a particular clamor to continue it. Oh, heavens to Betsy, stardom was something to be avoided."

You Can Customize your Denims

RICK RACK YOUR DENIMS—At right, wide bias rick rack is intertwined with hand-done French knots and herringbone stitches. You can pin rick rack in place and experiment with your own patterns combining rack rack and embroidery. At left, the rick rack has been made into roses. Take a yard of wide rick rack, fold in half and interlock by hooking Vs together. Place pin in the second point from raw end; fold raw end in and roll on itself up to pin. Remove pin. With thread, tack end and underside to hold shape. With same thread, stitch in one point and out the next along left edge of interlocked rick rack. Gather lightly by pulling that thread. Coil gathered points around the rose center—the coiled-up raw end—and tack to underside. Tack to garment. Make other roses and intersperse them with green rick rack points as leaves and chain stitches making stems. (Denim dress by Tracy Petites, shirt and jeans by Levi, rick rack and instructions by Wrights.)

Stamps In The News

Ambitious and somewhat complicated plans are in the works by the U.S. Postal Service to provide several cancellation services during the upcoming joint U.S.-Russian (Apollo-Soyuz) space mission. The cancellation services are in addition to the one mentioned in this column for the two 10-cent stamps which will be issued on the day of the launch at the Kennedy Space Center scheduled for July 15.

The Postal Service will provide pictorial cancellations marking the linkup of the spacecraft scheduled for July 17. The cancellations, depicting the spacecraft, will be applied in Houston and at the Kennedy Space Center. In addition there will be cancellations for the splashdown, now scheduled for July 24.

For collectors who wish to place their orders, here is the chronological listing of cancellation services:

July 15 — first day of issue for the two Apollo-Soyuz commemorative stamps at Kennedy Space Center. The cost is 10 cents per stamp (20 cents for the pair) with remittance in money order. Envelopes should read "Apollo-Soyuz Stamps," Postmaster, Kennedy Space Center, Fla. 32815.

July 17 — Linkup of Apollo-Soyuz spacecraft scheduled. Orders should be addressed to "Linkup Cancel" in care of the Postmaster, Houston, Tex. 77013. Covers submitted must bear first class or airmail stamps.

July 24 — Apollo splashdown is scheduled. Pictorial cancellations will be applied to mail received at San Francisco and Norfolk by this date. They should be addressed to "Splashdown Cancel" in care of the Postmaster at either San Francisco, Calif. 94101 or Norfolk, Va. 23501.

Mail orders for mint U.S. Apollo-Soyuz commemoratives will be filled only by the Philatelic Sales Division. Collectors desiring these mint U.S. stamps should send their orders to "Apollo-Soyuz Stamps," Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265. Remittance must include a 50-cent handling charge in the form of a money order or certified check.

Little Surinam has issued two semipostals to hail the International Women's Year. The commemoratives have a common design that includes the stylized bird emblem of the IWY and features the head of a woman looking upwards into a light panel.

The 15 cents plus 5 bears the legend (in Dutch) Equality, Education and Peace. The 30 c plus 15 has the inscription 1975 Year of the Woman.

Many countries throughout the world, including the U.S., have issued, or soon will issue, stamps honoring the International Women's Year.

It would probably take the wizardry of a magician to accomplish this fact, but some philatelists have requested that the U.S. should issue a stamp honoring the great escape artist Harry Houdini. He was born as Ehrich Weiss at Appleton, Wis., in 1874 but took his name from the famous French magician Jean Houdin for whom France issued a commemorative stamp in 1971. The American magical artist Houdini died Oct. 31, 1926, and the 50th anniversary of his death, say his fond supporters, would be a fitting occasion for a special U.S. stamp.

Blending the old with the new, Antigua has issued five new stamps depicting some of its churches which dot the countryside. Featured are the Lady of the Valley Church, Gilbert Memorial Church, Grace Hill Moravian, St. Phillips Church and Ebenezer Methodist Church. A souvenir sheet will show an altar plus the three high values.

Bernie ordinance forms cemetery board

BERNIE — The creation of a board of directors for the city cemetery, application for federal grants, purchase of a new police car and appointment of a police dispatcher were handled by the City Council Monday night.

The council passed an ordinance creating a three-member board of directors to over see the city cemetery and appointed J. M. Allen to a one-year term, Leon Bowman to a two-year term and Elmer Kinkade to a three-year term.

The board will administer funds connected with the operation of the cemetery and have the authority to create a savings account in State Bank of Bernie in which people can donate money, City Clerk Maxine Foster said.

The board will report to the budget committee on June 1 of each year for an audit.

The city owns only one cemetery but is continually expanding it, Mrs. Foster said.

Mayor R. B. Woods suggested to the council that the city apply for discretionary fund for community development from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The council agreed to the suggestion and set Nov. 20 as the date for a special public hearing so citizens can discuss and make recommendations on how much to apply for and for what purposes the money should be used.

Woods said today that most area towns will probably apply for the funds and that the maximum any town can receive is $4,000.

The council accepted a bid of $4,966.81 from City Motor Sales of Dexter for a new police car and appointed Tony Walker as a permanent police dispatcher with a 10 cent per hour raise. He had formerly been a temporary employe.

It was also decided to send Walker and another police dispatcher, Edward Robertson, to a dispatching school. Mrs. Foster said that it has not yet been decided where they will attend.

The only punishment for nepotism, defined in the Missouri Constitution as "naming or appointing" a close relation to public office, is ouster from office.

Hurley filed a similar suit against Sheriff Simmons, charging him with hiring his daughter, Jenneth Kellett, as bookkeeper for the ambulance service and his son-in-law, Dr. Carter P. Fenton, to treat prisoners in the county jail at v arious times. The Simmons case will be heard in Feb. 23, 1976 by Judge William L. Ragland of Caruthersville, circuit judge of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties.

In accordance with state law for filling the first district vacancy in the County Court, Gov. Christopher Bond will appoint a replacement to serve the remainder of Hurley's term.

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Standard that members of Scott and Stoddard County Courts would attend a meeting at 7 p.m. today at Holday Inn in Sikeston for discussion on Tri-County Counseling Service, Inc. request for office space and a fulltime secretary.

The article should have listed Scott and Mississippi County courts. Stoddard County has declined to attend the meeting.

Property tax change to be recommended

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Recommendations to correct inequities in the property tax system will be made by Gov. Christopher S. Bond to the legislature for consideration during the upcoming regular session, according to an aide.

Ralph Smith, Bond's executive assistant, told the House Revenue and Economics Committee Tuesday that the governor's staff is now review both "original" and previously proposed solutions to the problem.

He said those recommendations should be ready by Dec. 1.

Smith also told the panel, which was charged by the House to look into the property tax system during the recent special session, that state Revenue Director James Spradling has been meeting with local officials and community leaders from around the state to review problems in the property tax system.

There is no need to spend time further studying the problem of inequitable tax assessments to find solutions, Smith said, when numerous solutions have already been proposed. While declining to specify the solutions under consideration, he acknowledged that the property tax system in the state must be "generally overhauled. It is quite antiquated."

Oran clerk position remains unresolved

ORAN—The City Council Monday night rejected Mayor Kenneth Ransdell's recommendation for the hiring of a new city clerk after the mayor announced that he had made his choice from three applicants. The position remained unfilled when Ransdell declined to make an alternate recommendation until a later date.

Ransdell said all three persons were qualified but, with the complexity of the paper work on federal grants, he thought the person to be recommended should have experience in filling out such forms.

Ransdell said his choice for the clerk position—vacant since the death of Martin T. Menz on Oct. 6—was Naomi McCallister, who served as city collector a number of years prior to being defeated in 1972.

The vote by the council rejected Ransdell's recommendation.

The mayor then told the council this was the only recommendation he had to present at that time.

Councilman Melton Harris asked Ransdell why he did not make an alternate recommendation. Ransdell replied that he was not prepared to make another recommendation Monday night but would submit another name next month.

Councilman Benny Evans asked why the mayor was the only one who could make recommendations. In reply, Ransdell read the city ordinance pertaining to appointment authority, which delegates the mayor to make the recommendations.

Evans then said the ordinance was in conflict with state statues. However, the state statue book was not available and the mayor said he would check with City attorney Tom Arnold on the legality of the ordinance.

The other two applicants for the position are Mary Todt and Nadine Beyers.

Menz had been city clerk for 22 years at the time of his death.

Other business before the council included selection of an engineer to develop a study of the city's sewage disposal system, which is to be submitted to the state's Clean Water Commission in compliance with Environmental Protection Agency and Missouri Department of Natural Resources anti-pollution standards on sewage.

Oran has been designated a high priority city for funding to update its sewage treatment plant with a federally funded program to provide 90 per cent of the cost.

The program is handled in three phases, the first being a study to find what is needed to meet sewage pollution requirements, the second being drawing of plans for elimination of the problem and phase three being actual construction to meet requirements.

The city has until June 1976 to have the engineering report on phase one completed in order to qualify for the federal funding.

Four engineering firms presented plans for the study. Two were received by mail and the other two were presented in person.

Alex C. Waters of Waters & Associates of Sikeston presented a plan for a study at an approximate cost of $10,000 to $11,000. The second presentation was made by William Shirley and Bill Cline, representing Shirley Engineering Corp. & Associates of St. Louis, with an approximate cost of $8,000 to $10,000.

Estimates by the other two firms included: Russell and Axon Engineering of St. Louis, $7,500, and Sverdrup & Parcel Engineering of St. Louis, cost not disclosed.

The council accepted the offer of Waters & Associates of Sikeston.

Eldrid V. Seabaugh, an Oran resident, presented to the council a letter from the Scott County Health Department about livestock owned by Ebon McCallister, penned up by his house within the city limits, stating that it was a health problem and suggested he present it to the council.

It was learned the city has no ordinance against livestock within the city.

Ransdell said he would check with the city attorney on an ordinance pertaining to public nuisance, which may cover the situation.

Ransdell also commented on the upcoming planning and zoning meeting on Nov. 24, which will develop zoning ordinances to keep such businesses as livestock in certain areas of the city.

Purchases authorized by the council included an air compressor for the city garage, base and mobile citizens band radios for the police department, two new tires for the police car, new lighting for the police station and the purchase of a typewriter and adding machine for the city clerk's office, to replace equipment personally owned by the former clerk.

Bernie ordinance forms cemetery board

BERNIE — The creation of a board of directors for the city cemetery, application for federal grants, purchase of a new police car and appointment of a police dispatcher were handled by the City Council Monday night.

The council passed an ordinance creating a three-member board of directors to over see the city cemetery and appointed J. M. Allen to a one-year term, Leon Bowman to a two-year term and Elmer Kinkade to a three-year term.

The board will administer funds connected with the operation of the cemetery and have the authority to create a savings account in State Bank of Bernie in which people can donate money, City Clerk Maxine Foster said.

The board will report to the budget committee on June 1 of each year for an audit.

The city owns only one cemetery but is continually expanding it, Mrs. Foster said.

Mayor R. B. Woods suggested to the council that the city apply for discretionary fund for community development from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The council agreed to the suggestion and set Nov. 20 as the date for a special public hearing so citizens can discuss and make recommendations on how much to apply for and for what purposes the money should be used.

Woods said today that most area towns will probably apply for the funds and that the maximum any town can receive is $4,000.

The council accepted a bid of $4,966.81 from City Motor Sales of Dexter for a new police car and appointed Tony Walker as a permanent police dispatcher with a 10 cent per hour raise. He had formerly been a temporary employe.

It was also decided to send Walker and another police dispatcher, Edward Robertson, to a dispatching school. Mrs. Foster said that it has not yet been decided where they will attend.

The only punishment for nepotism, defined in the Missouri Constitution as "naming or appointing" a close relation to public office, is ouster from office.

Hurley filed a similar suit against Sheriff Simmons, charging him with hiring his daughter, Jenneth Kellett, as bookkeeper for the ambulance service and his son-in-law, Dr. Carter P. Fenton, to treat prisoners in the county jail at various times. The Simmons case will be heard in Feb. 23, 1976 by Judge William L. Ragland of Caruthersville, circuit judge of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties.

In accordance with state law for filling the first district vacancy in the County Court, Gov. Christopher Bond will appoint a replacement to serve the remainder of Hurley's term.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Standard that members of Scott and Stoddard County Courts would attend a meeting at 7 p.m. today at Holday Inn in Sikeston for discussion on Tri-County Counseling Service, Inc. request for office space and a fulltime secretary.

The article should have listed Scott and Mississippi County courts. Stoddard County has declined to attend the meeting.

Property tax change to be recommended

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Recommendations to correct inequities in the property tax system will be made by Gov. Christopher S. Bond to the legislature for consideration during the upcoming regular session, according to an aide.

Ralph Smith, Bond's executive assistant, told the House Revenue and Economics Committee Tuesday that the governor's staff is now review both "original" and previously proposed solutions to the problem.

He said those recommendations should be ready by Dec. 1.

Smith also told the panel, which was charged by the House to look into the property tax system during the recent special session, that state Revenue Director James Spradling has been meeting with local officials and community leaders from around the state to review problems in the property tax system.

There is no need to spend time further studying the problem of inequitable tax assessments to find solutions, Smith said, when numerous solutions have already been proposed. While declining to specify the solutions under consideration, he acknowledged that the property tax system in the state must be "generally overhauled. It is quite antiquated."

Oran clerk position remains unresolved

ORAN—The City Council Monday night rejected Mayor Kenneth Ransdell's recommendation for the hiring of a new city clerk after the mayor announced that he had made his choice from three applicants. The position remained unfilled when Ransdell declined to make an alternate recommendation until a later date.

Ransdell said all three persons were qualified but, with the complexity of the paper work on federal grants, he thought the person to be recommended should have experience in filling out such forms.

Ransdell said his choice for the clerk position—vacant since the death of Martin T. Menz on Oct. 6—was Naomi McCallister, who served as city collector a number of years prior to being defeated in 1972.

The vote by the council rejected Ransdell's recommendation.

The mayor then told the council this was the only recommendation he had to present at that time.

Councilman Melton Harris asked Ransdell why he did not make an alternate recommendation. Ransdell replied that he was not prepared to make another recommendation Monday night but would submit another name next month.

Councilman Benny Evans asked why the mayor was the only one who could make recommendations. In reply, Ransdell read the city ordinance pertaining to appointment authority, which delegates the mayor to make the recommendations.

Evans then said the ordinance was in conflict with state statues. However, the state statue book was not available and the mayor said he would check with City attorney Tom Arnold on the legality of the ordinance.

The other two applicants for the position are Mary Todt and Nadine Beyers.

Menz had been city clerk for 22 years at the time of his death.

Other business before the council included selection of an engineer to develop a study of the city's sewage disposal system, which is to be submitted to the state's Clean Water Commission in compliance with Environmental Protection Agency and Missouri Department of Natural Resources anti-pollution standards on sewage.

Oran has been designated a high priority city for funding to update its sewage treatment plant with a federally funded program to provide 90 per cent of the cost.

The program is handled in three phases, the first being a study to find what is needed to meet sewage pollution requirements, the second being drawing of plans for elimination of the problem and phase three being actual construction to meet requirements.

The city has until June 1976 to have the engineering report on phase one completed in order to qualify for the federal funding.

Four engineering firms presented plans for the study. Two were received by mail and the other two were presented in person.

Alex C. Waters of Waters & Associates of Sikeston presented a plan for a study at an approximate cost of $10,000 to $11,000. The second presentation was made by William Shirley and Bill Cline, representing Shirley Engineering Corp. & Associates of St. Louis, with an approximate cost of $8,000 to $10,000.

Estimates by the other two firms included: Russell and Axon Engineering of St. Louis, $7,500, and Sverdrup & Parcel Engineering of St. Louis, cost not disclosed.

The council accepted the offer of Waters & Associates of Sikeston.

Eldrid V. Seabaugh, an Oran resident, presented to the council a letter from the Scott County Health Department about livestock owned by Ebon McCallister, penned up by his house within the city limits, stating that it was a health problem and suggested he present it to the council.

It was learned the city has no ordinance against livestock within the city.

New Madrid Co. preview:

Lilbourn is team to beat

We want to take a look at the New Madrid County conference. Lilbourn has completely dominated the conference for the past two seasons and looks like the team to beat again this season.

LILBOURN---The Panthers have won two straight class 2A state championships and have a current winning streak of 42 consecutive games under their two different coaches over the past two seasons. Larry Warren built the powerhouse two years ago and then give up coaching for the principal job and turned over the coaching to Bob Phelps who promptly led the Panthers through an undefeated season.

Lilbourn came close to having their steak snapped last season four different times but pulled the games out late in the fourth period. Each time it was two-time all-stater Frankie Robinson who played a big roll in their salvation.

Lilbourn lost some fine guards in Ernest McFerron and Detral Treadwell but have Robinson returning along with Jim Baker and Don Treadwell.

Robinson can play guard and forward so the ball handling will not be missed any but if Robinson plays guard then his vacant forward spot will have to be filled. It might be hard for coach Phelps to replace such talent as Det Treadwell and McFerron. Don Treadwell, who was probably the most underrated player on the team last year, is reported to have heart trouble and may not be as effective as before.

The Panthers want another state championship and the state record of 65 consecutive wins so they'll be putting out every effort to keep the streak alive this season.

Summary: If Don Treadwell is ok to play the Panthers should be as tough as last year.

NEW MADRID---Coach Carroll Compton always has a rough, tough defensive ball club but has lacked the good offense it takes to be a winner the past few seasons.

The Indians lost a real good big man in Steve Glenn who graduated along with most of their other talent. Returning will be Ralph Tucker for coach Compton to build a team. Summary: Always good on defense but short on offense.

PARMA--Coach Wayne Early lost most of his starters last season and pretty much has to do some rebuilding for the future. Summary: The Pirates may have some scoring but lack good height and defense.

RISCO--Coach Stan Whitson will have to start over again after losing most of his team to graduation. The Tigers had their first good winning season last year in many, many years. Summary: Must look up to Lilbourn again this year. Not enough talent to be a serious threat.

PORTAGEVILLE---The Bulldogs are in their second year of rebuilding and will get hurt a lot again but may find some good talent for the future.

GIDEON---The Bulldogs lost some good players last year and like all the other teams in the conference must put up with the Lilbourn Panthers again.

MATTHEWS--The Pirates have a new coach in Dal Sexton and must start all over again. The Pirates have some good shooters and some speed but must improve on defense to beat the good teams.

ASU defense ranked No. 1 in NCAA stats

JONESBORO, ARK.--- Arkansas State University's nationally ranked defense continually opens a few more eyes each Saturday.

Last week, in a defense-dominated 48-o victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga, it opened a few mouths, too. Check out some of the comments overheard in the Indian Stadium press box as ASU improved its season record to 8-0.

College scout: "If I had their defense, I wouldn't care if I had an offense or not."

Sports writer: "I'd bet money on that defense anytime, and I'm not a bettin' man."

Another scout: "That defense is is just unreal. I'll bet it could play the whole game and outscore either of those offenses out there."

Veteran sportscaster: "This is the first time this year I've seen Arkansas State play, and I'm impressed. Has the defense been playing like this all year?"

Yes, it has. In fact, it seems to be mellowing with age. And the manhandling of the Moccasins at Homecoming represents a season peak for the Tribe. The shutout has moved ASU into the role of "No. 1-ranked in the nation" in defense against scoring, according to the NCAA Statistics Service.

The Indians have allowed only 49 points this season in eight games, or 6.1 points per game. That places them just ahead of No. 2 Alabama (6.3) and No. 3 Texas A&M)6.6).

ASU also climbed a notch in two other defensive categories--to fourth in total defense (188.9 average yards allowed) and fourth in rushing defense (88.9).

"We've been talking about our defense all year," said ASU Head Coach Bill Davidson, "and we have to keep talking about it. It's hard to lose when the other team can't score against your defense, when you know your defense is going to find a way to score."

The Indian stoppers have actually permitted only 17 points themselves. The other 32 points have come largely from opponents capitalizing on ASU's offensive mistakes.

The Tribe, which allowed UTC 57 yards total offense on 61 plays (less than a yard per play), had a field day in the Moccasin backfield. Twenty times ASU halted the visitors for losses totaling 99 yards. That gives A-State's defense 85 behind-the-line stops this season for 403-minus yards.

Saturday's game was what ASU's defensive coaches term a "perfect" one. All 12 defensive goals (create three turnovers on opponent's end of field, allow no third-down completions for first downs, score at least once, allow less than 100 yards rushing, etc.) were accomplished for the first time this season.

With three games remaining, they hope it won't be the last.

Palmer is AL Cy Young winner

BALTIMORE (AP) — A warm, sunny day in the off season usually finds Jim Palmer on the golf course.

But while the skies were bright and temperatures reached the mid 70s Tuesday, the Baltimore Orioles' right-hander stayed in his backyard garden, waiting for the telephone to ring.

The choice paid off. Late in the day, Palmer received a call telling him he had been named winner of the Cy Young Award as the American League's top pitcher.

"I was out in the garden spreading mulch when I found out," said Palmer, a Cy Young winner for the second time in three years. "Normally on a day like this I would have been playing golf, but I knew the award was supposed to be announced so I decided to stick close to home."

Palmer, who came back from an injury-plagued 1974 season to post a 23-11 record this year, outdistanced Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees in voting by a special 24-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The only pitcher named on all 24 ballots cast, Palmer finished with a total of 98 points including 15 first-place votes. Hunter — who won last year's Cy Young Award with the Oakland A's — finished with 75 points including seven first-place ballots. Hunter was named by 22 voters.

Rollie Fingers of Oakland was third with 25 points, including two first-place votes. California's Frank Tanana and Chicago's Jim Kaat had seven points apiece, followed by Oakland's Vida Blue and Chicago's Rich Gossage, each with two points. Boston's Rick Wise received one point.

First place was worth five points, second place three points and third place one point. The balloting, with eight pitchers receiving votes, was the most diversified since the award was first presented in 1956.

Hunter, who also won 23 games after getting off to a slow start with the Yankees, had been considered Palmer's stiffest competition for the prize. But the Orioles' ace said he was confident he'd come out on top with the voters.

Asked if he thought he was the best pitcher in the league, Palmer replied: "I think I'm one of the best. The statistics show I had a better year than Catfish, but I don't think I'm any better than him."

Besides his 23 victories, which tied him with Hunter for the most in the major leagues, Palmer topped the majors with a 2.09 earned run average and 10 shutouts.

Palmer's 23 victories in 1975 give him a career won-lost record of 152-80 for a .655 winning percentage, the best among active pitchers.

Only four other pitchers have won two Cy Young Awards, including Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, Bob Gibsn of St. Louis, Denny McLain of Detroit and Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles. Koufax is the only three-time winner.

Spirits dump Utah for fifth straight

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Spirits of St. Louis made it five straight Tuesday night with Don Adams, Freddie Lewis and Marvin Barnes combining for 76 points in a 115-110 American Basketball Association victory over the Utah Stars.

There wer no other ABA games scheduled.

Spirits' Coach Rod Thorn creditied, in part, Adams with his consistent game performance for the victory but called Barnes' play late in the fourth quarter the turning point.

"We were up by only a couple of points and Barnes came through with a three-point play. I knew we could do it from then on," Thorn said.

St. Louis had won three of the four previous games without Barnes, who had suffered a pulled muscle.

At game's end, Adams and Lewis each had 27 points, tying Utah's John Roche for game scoring honors. Barnes added 22 for the Spirits and Ron Boone aided the Utah cause with 25 points.

St. Louis held a 22-20 lead after one quarter, but Roche started driving to the basket in the second period. The spunky little guard put in 14 points in the quarter and the Stars moved to a five-point lead before Adams rallied the Spirits to a 53-52 halftime edge.

Boone and Roche sparked Utah to a 72-63 lead in the third period, but Barnes and Lewis brought the Spirits right back so they led 83-78 going into the final stretch.

Utah's Randy Denton caught a Maurice Lucas elbow in the forehead on a rebound in the third period, touching off a row that cleared both benches and held up the game for five minutes until order was restored.

Denton left the game for repairs but was back in action in the last period.

The game was tied at 92 midway in the final quarter when the Spirits, led again by Adams and Barnes, moved to a 102-94 margin and held on for the victory.

New Madrid Co. preview:

Lilbourn is team to beat

We want to take a look at the New Madrid County conference. Lilbourn has completely dominated the conference for the past two seasons and looks like the team to beat again this season.

LILBOURN---The Panthers have won two straight class 2A state championships and have a current winning streak of 42 consecutive games under their two different coaches over the past two seasons. Larry Warren built the powerhouse two years ago and then give up coaching for the principal job and turned over the coaching to Bob Phelps who promptly led the Panthers through an undefeated season.

Lilbourn came close to having their steak snapped last season four different times but pulled the games out late in the fourth period. Each time it was two-time all-stater Frankie Robinson who played a big roll in their salvation.

Lilbourn lost some fine guards in Ernest McFerron and Detral Treadwell but have Robinson returning along with Jim Baker and Don Treadwell.

Robinson can play guard and forward so the ball handling will not be missed any but if Robinson plays guard then his vacant forward spot will have to be filled. It might be hard for coach Phelps to replace such talent as Det Treadwell and McFerron. Don Treadwell, who was probably the most underrated player on the team last year, is reported to have heart trouble and may not be as effective as before.

The Panthers want another state championship and the state record of 65 consecutive wins so they'll be putting out every effort to keep the streak alive this season.

Summary: If Don Treadwell is ok to play the Panthers should be as tough as last year.

NEW MADRID---Coach Carroll Compton always has a rough, tough defensive ball club but has lacked the good offense it takes to be a winner the past few seasons.

The Indians lost a real good big man in Steve Glenn who graduated along with most of their other talent. Returning will be Ralph Tucker for coach Compton to build a team. Summary: Always good on defense but short on offense.

PARMA--Coach Wayne Early lost most of his starters last season and pretty much has to do some rebuilding for the future. Summary: The Pirates may have some scoring but lack good height and defense.

RISCO--Coach Stan Whitson will have to start over again after losing most of his team to graduation. The Tigers had their first good winning season last year in many, many years. Summary: Must look up to Lilbourn again this year. Not enough talent to be a serious threat.

PORTAGEVILLE---The Bulldogs are in their second year of rebuilding and will get hurt a lot again but may find some good talent for the future.

GIDEON---The Bulldogs lost some good players last year and like all the other teams in the conference must put up with the Lilbourn Panthers again.

MATTHEWS--The Pirates have a new coach in Dal Sexton and must start all over again. The Pirates have some good shooters and some speed but must improve on defense to beat the good teams.

8th grade finishes 6-0

The Sikeston eighth grade football team completed an undefeated season last night at Cape Girardeau as they defeated Cape's junior high squad 8-6.

As in the past, coach Mike Foster praised the defensive unit, which has large role in the team's spotless 8-0 record this season. Foster singled out Mark Poole, Joey Kyle, Rick Leonard, Marty Williams, Harry Tope and Larry Laster for their outstanding play last night.

Coach Foster gave credit to the Jaycee Little League program for building up an interest in football. A total of 56 eighth grade boys were still with the team at the close of the season.

Cape took a 6-0 lead in the second period of yesterday's contest, getting a 20-yard TD run on a counter play. Sikeston's Terry Duncan became the offensive hero when he took the second half kickoff and returned it 85 yards for the score. Gary Laster ran the ball over for the two-pointer to give Sikeston the winning margin.

Church groups among targets of IRS probe

WASHINGTON (AP) Church groups and movie stars, senators and rock singers, civil rights leaders and the mayor of New York City were all targets of an IRS tax probe originally aimed at political extremists, the chairman of the Senate intelligence committee says.

In addition, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander testified Thursday that last year alone IRS agents turned over 29,520 tax returns on 8,210 taxpayers to a dozen other federal agencies for one reason or another.

Alexander said that until he stopped it last year, a computer system had been fed information on 465,442 persons, including Alexander himself.

The IRS commissioner also agreed with Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, that the tax-collecting agency had no business complying with a 1967 CIA request to audit the tax returns of Ramparts magazine as a means of preventing or blunting its forthcoming expose about the National Student Association operated overseas as a CIA front.

"I can't imagine a more clear-cut instance of the CIA using the IRS for the purpose of getting a magazine that proposed to reveal activities the CIA wanted to conceal," Church said.

"The IRS has no business engaging in the use of its processes to harass so-called enemies," said Alexander, who became IRS commissioner in May 1973.

Among the names on the list were former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay, former U.S. Sens. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., and Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska; Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich.; columnist Joseph Alsop; writers Norman Mailer and Jimmy Breslin; rock singer James Brown;, actress Shirley MacLaine; singer Joan Baez; and civil rights leaders Aaron Henry, Jesse Jackson and Coretta King.

Also listed were comedian Godfrey Cambridge and Nobel Prize-winning scientist Linus Pauling.

Alexander's testimony before the intelligence panel disclosed for the first time that undercover tax agents have been used to infiltrate tax-resister groups, and in at least one case reported the legal strategies of such a group to the Justice Department.

Alexander said two such agents currently are active and he defended their use.

Alexander testified that four months after taking office he learned of the existence inside IRS of the Special Services Staff (SSS) and ordered it disbanded on grounds it had nothing to do with legitimate collection of taxes.

The special unit was formed in 1965 during the directorship of Commissioner Randolph Thrower and continued under IRS Commissioner Johnnie Walters.

Alexander said that during that time the unit had compiled records on more than 8,000 individuals and 3,000 groups and sent many of them to field offices for tax audits.

Alexander said he had ordered files of the special unit preserved while investigations are going on.

He said once these are concluded he wants to take the records to the Ellipse behind the White House "and have the biggest bonfire since 1814," the year British troops burned Washington.

Jack Nicklaus won his fifth Masters title by taking the final round lead on the 16th hole where he sank a 40-foot birdie putt for a deuce.

Signs of the times

Samples of some 15,000 clay tablets written in cuneiform characters of the Sumerian language and an unknown Semitic tongue lay in digs after their recent discovery by an Italian archaeological team near Tall Mardih, south of Aleppo, Syria. The tablets are believed to belong to the archives of the ancient city-state of Elba which flourished some 2,300 years before the birth of Christ. They include diplomatic and military correspondence, commercial transactions and Sumerian vocabularies for schoolchildren. (AP Wirephoto)

The unlikeliest victim of My Lai

By Tom Tiede

COLUMBUS, Ga. — (NEA) — There is a sometimes notion in this part of the republic that William Calley should go into politics. Someone at a dinner party, the other night, for example, got the idea, loudly, and laid a dream ticket on the guests: George Wallace and Rusty Calley, the all-America team, or at least all a part of that America capable of inventing such potentialities.

The suggestion is inevitably sobered by realities, however. Though Calley has given thought to politics, and almost any other way to earn a living, he is at the moment and possibly forever forbidden from doing so. As a federally convicted murderer of "not less than 22 Vietnamese civilians," in My Lai, South Vietnam, he is barred from holding public office. Besides this, neither major party here shows any interest whatsoever in promoting his candidacy.

If he could run, however, he would doubtless receive a substantial vote from that portion of the citizenry that clings to the philosophy that he is something special. Seven years after the murders, four years after his sentence to life imprisonment and a year after his eventual release from confinement, Calley remains a symbol to many, a hero to some. "I can see him as a congressman," says a Columbus councilman, "we could use more of what he stands for in Washington."

Just what it is William Calley stands for is, however, unknown, even in his adopted hometown. Despite a few attempts at public speaking in which he was numbingly lachyrymose and self indulgent, he has shown nothing more of himself, preferring to live his life in mystery and anonymity. He lives with a large dog in a moderately expensive apartment, travels often, dates only occasionally, has few friends other than those with whom he has legal or business ties.

His Tennessee attorney says he is technically available for appearances if the price is right ($1,500 per speech, five figures for television), but other than this he is, almost eerily, seldom even seen anymore.

Acquaintences say Calley is hermitical for reasons of self defense. He fears media exploitation, commenting once to local newsman Jack Swift that he resented reporters poking into such matters as his sex life. Calley told Swift the world should just "let me die." Calley has told others here that he simply wants to "build a new life." His Tennessee lawyer, J. Houston Gordon, says the one-time infantryman has run away from the gossipy invasion of his person.

Meanwhile, there is another view of Calley's social disappearance. Columbus attorney Vincent McCauley, who once headed a citizens for Calley movement, says his friend, now 32 years old, "is at a stage where he thinks this thing (My Lai) owes him something." McCauley suggests Calley is keeping out of the newspapers until he can latch on to some kind of future. "Last time I saw him he looked terrible, fat and balding. I think he needs a good job."

Until recently, according to another local attorney, Kenneth Henson, Calley was working for a contracting firm. He did some manual labor and some office clerking. "But I understand the company got into financial difficulties," says Henson. Currently, Calley lives on fees paid for public appearances (one estimate is $20,000 this year). There is speculation he also receives small amounts of money from Americans who hear from time to time that he is in heavy debt (his legal bills are substantial but otherwise he is allright).

His friends say he would like to go into a partnership with a "sugardaddy," possibly the restaurant business. The same friends say he is embittered because, of the more than 100 people involved in the 1968 assault on My Lai, he alone has to hide away with little future prospect. His captain, Ernest Medina, is growing moderately wealthy in the helicopter industry; his colonel, Oren Henderson, now has a flashy job with the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission. Calley feels he is thus a victim of My Lai, almost as much as the dead.

He has one hope, a friend says, and it is that the Supreme Court will yet hear his petition, and reverse his conviction. That prospect, however, is faint. Thus Lt. William Calley, the best known soldier of Vietnam, continues to live in a kind of at-large prison of his past.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In announcing the establishment of two new computer-based systems designed to speed the world-wide transfer and exchange of technology, William C. Norris, chairman of Control Data Corp., has reported ... "the United States will spend $35 billion of the world total of $70 billion on research and development in 1975."

He said, however, that "this cumulative stock of knowledge is likely to be unevenly put to use, particularly in the developing societies of Latin America, Asia and Africa." The new systems are intended, in part, to remedy this problem by performing as communications networks between nations, carrying news of available technology, ideas, patents and processes, as well as news of technology wanted and needed in nations other than the United States.

Church groups among targets of IRS probe

WASHINGTON (AP) Church groups and movie stars, senators and rock singers, civil rights leaders and the mayor of New York City were all targets of an IRS tax probe originally aimed at political extremists, the chairman of the Senate intelligence committee says.

In addition, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander testified Thursday that last year alone IRS agents turned over 29,520 tax returns on 8,210 taxpayers to a dozen other federal agencies for one reason or another.

Alexander said that until he stopped it last year, a computer system had been fed information on 465,442 persons, including Alexander himself.

The IRS commissioner also agreed with Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, that the tax-collecting agency had no business complying with a 1967 CIA request to audit the tax returns of Ramparts magazine as a means of preventing or blunting its forthcoming expose about the National Student Association operated overseas as a CIA front.

"I can't imagine a more clear-cut instance of the CIA using the IRS for the purpose of getting a magazine that proposed to reveal activities the CIA wanted to conceal," Church said.

"The IRS has no business engaging in the use of its processes to harass so-called enemies," said Alexander, who became IRS commissioner in May 1973.

Among the names on the list were former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay, former U.S. Sens. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., and Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska; Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich.; columnist Joseph Alsop; writers Norman Mailer and Jimmy Breslin; rock singer James Brown; actress Shirley MacLaine; singer Joan Baez; and civil rights leaders Aaron Henry, Jesse Jackson and Coretta King.

Also listed were comedian Godfrey Cambridge and Nobel Prize-winning scientist Linus Pauling.

Alexander's testimony before the intelligence panel disclosed for the first time that undercover tax agents have been used to infiltrate tax-resister groups, and in at least one case reported the legal strategies of such a group to the Justice Department.

Alexander said two such agents currently are active and he defended their use.

Alexander testified that four months after taking office he learned of the existence inside IRS of the Special Services Staff (SSS) and ordered it disbanded on grounds it had nothing to do with legitimate collection of taxes.

The special unit was formed in 1965 during the directorship of Commissioner Randolph Thrower and continued under IRS Commissioner Johnnie Walters.

Alexander said that during that time the unit had compiled records on more than 8,000 individuals and 3,000 groups and sent many of them to field offices for tax audits.

Alexander said he had ordered files of the special unit preserved while investigations are going on.

He said once these are concluded he wants to take the records to the Ellipse behind the White House "and have the biggest bonfire since 1814," the year British troops burned Washington.

Jack Nicklaus won his fifth Masters title by taking the final round lead on the 16th hole where he sank a 40-foot birdie putt for a deuce.

Signs of the times

Samples of some 15,000 clay tablets written in cuneiform characters of the Sumerian language and an unknown Semitic tongue lay in digs after their recent discovery by an Italian archaeological team near Tall Mardih, south of Aleppo, Syria. The tablets are believed to belong to the archives of the ancient city-state of Elba which flourished some 2,300 years before the birth of Christ. They include diplomatic and military correspondence, commercial transactions and Sumerian vocabularies for schoolchildren. (AP Wirephoto)

New chairman

John G. Levis, left, has succeeded James H. Bogle, right, as chairman of the Air Conservation Commission of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources. Levis, of 36 Portland Place, is associated with Bridge Trading Corp. of St. Louis. Bogle, of East Prairie, served 10 years on the commission. Natural resources group elects commission officers

JEFFERSON CITY — Two St. Louis area men have been elected chairman and vice chairman of the seven- member Air Conservation Commission of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources, Michael T. Marshall, commission director of staff, announced Tuesday.

John G. Levis was elected chairman, and John R. Barsanti Jr., vice chairman, at a recent commission meeting in St. Louis.

Levis, 36 Portland Place, associated with Bridge Trading Corp., 10050 Manchester Ave., St. Louis, is a public representative. Barsanti, who represents industry, lives at 12195 Bellmead, Des Peres.

The commission's new agricultural representative is Joseph Pepper of 1005 Black Hawk, Weston. Pepper replaces former chairman James H. Bogle of East Prairie who served 10 years on the commission.

James L. Robinett Jr. of 1902 Cardinal, Springfield, replaced John A. Howell, of Malden, a public representative for three years.

Other members are James P. Townley, Townley Metal and Hardware Co., Kansas City, public representative; Richard L. Jarrett, 2005 Leslie, Independence, labor representative, and David Gohn, West Plains, public representative.

The commission's next meeting will be Nov. 19 at the Clayton Inn, 7750 Carondelet Ave., Clayton.

Britain feels the pinch

LONDON (AP) — That previously unsullied symbol of British well-being, the Sunday joint of beef is seriously threatened by this nation's 26.3 per cent inflation rate, currently the highest in the industrial world.

So are the traditional family holidays at the seaside and the British-begun custom of sending out Christmas cards, which even the firm of Scrooge and Marley managed in the darkest Dickensian days.

Afternoon tea in the High Street has been elevated almost to a reckless extravagence, and dining out as a family is an event reserved only for graduations, important anniversaries and, as a suburban housewife put it: "Milestone occasions like coming back from a funeral."

These are some of the everyday sacrifices and concessions that British homemakers, wage-earners and merchants confess, in an informal sampling, to making to the soaring prices that attack the family budget and the shopkeeper's balance sheet from almost every corner of the economy.

"The Sunday joint isn't the institution it used to be. We've been known to have sausage on a Sunday," admitted Julie Hannon, a fireman's wife in the London suburb of Kingston-Upon-Thames and the mother of two children.

As recently as last spring, food bills for the Hannon family averaged $30 a week. Now she budgets $40 and spends "a good deal more than that, but won't admit it to myself. The crush has really come in the past two months. Everything has gone up: food, the gas, electricity, the rates (local taxes), telephones, the mail. We don't own a car, and it's been more than a year since we've eaten out as a family."

The figures Mrs. Hannon cites, if transposed to an American housewife who is confronted with about 8 per cent inflation, would read like this: the Sunday roast she bought at $2.40 a pound last year now sells for $5.20 a pound. The monthly phone bill was $8 a year ago; it's now $24. The electricity bill has doubled to $20 a month.

To cut fuel costs, Mrs. Hannon is determined not to turn the oil furnace on until the end of November, so the children "go to bed with hot water bottles and bed socks on cold nights."

The $12 weekly raise recently given to all London municipal workers brings Terence Hannon's annual wage to just below $6,000. But, as his wife confided, he has to moonlight "like every other London fireman or policeman fixing up homes and doing odd jobs" and she works as a secretary to pay off the mortgage on their $30,000 three-bedroom home.

For their vacation this summer, the Hannons shared a cottage in Cornwall with some neighbors for a week. "Something we never had to do before," said Julie, "and if I had my way, we wouldn't have gone at all. The money was needed for the children's schooling."

The Hannons spend more than $1,000 a year sending their children to private schools because they have no confidence in the local schools that are a fixture of the Labor government's education policy.

"We seldom see each other," she said. "We never go out anymore as a family, except maybe for an afternoon on the river. Still, we can't complain. We're keeping our head above water."

In nearby Malden, another London suburb, Sylvia Absolon, a lawyer's wife, unashamedly goes about their comfortable red brick house switching off lights, doesn't turn the heat on in the upstairs rooms until an hour before bedtime, and only telephones her friends after 6 p.m. when rates are lower.

The Absolons have eaten out only once since Christmas and thank their new "American-style" freezer for enabling them to buy in bulk quality "and keep up a reasonable way of eating."

When the new 17-cent first-class postal rates came in, they decided to cut down "drastically" on their Christmas card list and to deliver all the local cards themselves "by walking across the neighborhood lawns."

Sylvia Absolon's Christmas card rebellion, echoed by other British housewives, comes almost a century and a half after the English first instituted the custom with the invention of the penny post in 1839.

The Bond Street firm of Smythson (pronounced "Smite-Son), Stationers by Appointment to Her Majesty the Queen, is not unduly concerned that the Christmas card rebellion will spread to their clientelle. But Tom Neate, the general manager, has called on the staff to meet the inflationary crisis by turning off lights and cutting down on phone calls.

"They understand. They have to make economies in their own lives to get by," said Neate.

Across the street at Crombie's, the fine jewelers, business was booming despite inflated prices and the 25 per cent value-added tax imposed by the government on luxury items to discourage spending.

"The tax is counter-productive, people are buying more gold and gems than ever, they're so worried about the value of paper money," said Walter Crombie, whose grandfather began the business more than 100 years ago.

The commission's next meeting will be Nov. 19 at the Clayton Inn, 7750 Carondelet Ave., Clayton.

Britain feels the pinch

LONDON (AP) — That previously unsullied symbol of British well-being, the Sunday joint of beef is seriously threatened by this nation's 26.3 per cent inflation rate, currently the highest in the industrial world.

So are the traditional family holidays at the seaside and the British-begun custom of sending out Christmas cards, which even the firm of Scrooge and Marley managed in the darkest Dickensian days.

Afternoon tea in the High Street has been elevated almost to a reckless extravagence, and dining out as a family is an event reserved only for graduations, important anniversaries and, as a suburban housewife put it: "Milestone occasions like coming back from a funeral."

These are some of the everyday sacrifices and concessions that British homemakers, wage-earners and merchants confess, in an informal sampling, to making to the soaring prices that attack the family budget and the shopkeeper's balance sheet from almost every corner of the economy.

"The Sunday joint isn't the institution it used to be. We've been known to have sausage on a Sunday," admitted Julie Hannon, a fireman's wife in the London suburb of Kingston-Upon-Thames and the mother of two children.

As recently as last spring, food bills for the Hannon family averaged $30 a week. Now she budgets $40 and spends "a good deal more than that, but won't admit it to myself. The crush has really come in the past two months. Everything has gone up: food, the gas, electricity, the rates (local taxes), telephones, the mail. We don't own a car, and it's been more than a year since we've eaten out as a family."

The figures Mrs. Hannon cites, if transposed to an American housewife who is confronted with about 8 per cent inflation, would read like this: the Sunday roast she bought at $2.40 a pound last year now sells for $5.20 a pound. The monthly phone bill was $8 a year ago; it's now $24. The electricity bill has doubled to $20 a month.

To cut fuel costs, Mrs. Hannon is determined not to turn the oil furnace on until the end of November, so the children "go to bed with hot water bottles and bed socks on cold nights."

The $12 weekly raise recently given to all London municipal workers brings Terence Hannon's annual wage to just below $6,000. But, as his wife confided, he has to moonlight "like every other London fireman or policeman fixing up homes and doing odd jobs" and she works as a secretary to pay off the mortgage on their $30,000 three-bedroom home.

For their vacation this summer, the Hannons shared a cottage in Cornwall with some neighbors for a week. "Something we never had to do before," said Julie, "and if I had my way, we wouldn't have gone at all. The money was needed for the children's schooling."

The Hannons spend more than $1,000 a year sending their children to private schools because they have no confidence in the local schools that are a fixture of the Labor government's education policy.

"We seldom see each other," she said. "We never go out anymore as a family, except maybe for an afternoon on the river. Still, we can't complain. We're keeping our head above water."

In nearby Malden, another London suburb, Sylvia Absolon, a lawyer's wife, unashamedly goes about their comfortable red brick house switching off lights, doesn't turn the heat on in the upstairs rooms until an hour before bedtime, and only telephones her friends after 6 p.m. when rates are lower.

The Absolons have eaten out only once since Christmas and thank their new "American-style" freezer for enabling them to buy in bulk quality "and keep up a reasonable way of eating."

When the new 17-cent first-class postal rates came in, they decided to cut down "drastically" on their Christmas card list and to deliver all the local cards themselves "by walking across the neighborhood lawns."

Sylvia Absolon's Christmas card rebellion, echoed by other British housewives, comes almost a century and a half after the English first instituted the custom with the invention of the penny post in 1839.

The Bond Street firm of Smythson (pronounced "Smite-Son), Stationers by Appointment to Her Majesty the Queen, is not unduly concerned that the Christmas card rebellion will spread to their clientelle. But Tom Neate, the general manager, has called on the staff to meet the inflationary crisis by turning off lights and cutting down on phone calls.

"They understand. They have to make economies in their own lives to get by," said Neate.

Across the street at Crombie's, the fine jewelers, business was booming despite inflated prices and the 25 per cent value-added tax imposed by the government on luxury items to discourage spending.

"The tax is counter-productive, people are buying more gold and gems than ever, they're so worried about the value of paper money," said Walter Crombie, whose grandfather began the business more than 100 years ago.

November snow falls

50 years ago
November 5, 1925

The $82,000 sewer bonds of Sikeston, authorized at a special election on October 20, were sold at auction yesterday in the city council room and brought a premium of $2,050. This means that the city will get $84,050 for the issue.

Some of the gloom which gradually gathered during a month and more of almost continuous rainy weather and culminated with a big slump in the cotton market last week was dispelled by fair weather the first of this week and a decided upward trend in cotton prices.

A blanket of snow covered Southeast Missouri last Thursday, a most unusual occurrence for October. In fact, only a few old folks can remember when a sizeable snow fell in this section during the month of October.

Wednesday evening, the pupils of the seventh, eighth, ninth and 10th grades of the public school gave a program of merit in the way of gymnastic exercises, relay games, and physical culture feats, before an audience of about 300 friends and patrons of the school.

Missouri vacations safe

JEFFERSON CITY — A currently popular movie points up the safety of Missouri vacations, according to the state's Division of Tourism. "Missouri has over 19,000 miles of rivers and over 718,000 acres of lakes," says Director Jim Pasley, "yet with all our water we've never had a single reported shark attack."

Missouri is a great state for water-oriented fun. In fact, landlocked Missouri has m ore water than just about any other state. You can swim, fish, water ski, picnic, camp and relax on or near any of Missouri's rivers and lakes, but you'll never be bothered by sharks. There are no great whites, no hammerheads, no threshers, no tigers -- not even a measly dogfish.

What's the law?

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Harry was a 100 per cent patriotic American -- so long as it didn't hurt business. Consequently, when his secretary Peaches was subpoenaed for jury duty, he gave her a note to the court authorities explaining that his business couldn't spare her for the prescribed two week period and requested that she be excused from servinga s a juror.

Peaches, however, wanted to be a juror and, when she told this to the authorities, they graciously accepted her. Harry, on the other hand, was not nearly as gracious when he learned what happened and fired Peaches which upset her terribly.

In fact, even though she got a better job a week later, she sued Harry for having bounced her.

"A citizen shouldn't be discharged for discharging his duties," complained Peaches in court, "and serving on a jury is an obligation of all citizens."

"In the absence of a contract or a law prohibiting same," responded Harry, "an employer can fire an employe at any time for any reason -- just like an employe can quit a job at any time for any reason. Consequently, since I had no contract with Peaches and I violated no law in doing so, I had every right to fire Peaches."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Harry pay for canning Peaches?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while an employer is generally free to fire an employee at will,, absent a contract or law prohibiting same, there are circumstances where this is not so, such as in this case.

The jury system being highly regarded as an American institution, an employer cannot be permitted with impunity to discharge an employe for fulfilling his or her obligation to serve on a jury since it would adversely affect the entire jury system. The will of the community, concluded the judge, cannot be so thwarted.

(Based upon a 1975 Oregon Supreme Court Decision)

Dr. Lamb

Coffee may irritate colon

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would like more information on the foods containing caffeine. I have colitus and suffer so, I think my diet must be faulty.

DEAR READER — Coffee is irritating to some people's colon, and many readers have written me that their symptoms have disappeared after stopping it entirely. In most cases I think this is from the action of caffeine in the coffee, but it is true that some sensitive people don't tolerate the flavor oils in coffee, either.

To give you some information on how much caffeine you might find in beverages, send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 1-1, Coffee, Tea, Colas, Cocoa. You can send your request to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Enclose a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for mailing.

You may be surprised to see cocoa on the list. Many a mother gives her child cocoa to avoid the caffeine in coffee not knowing that cocoa also contains caffeine, and enough to give a child a good dose. The same applies to all cocoa products or chocolate.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if there are any side effects from taking Diuril for high blood pressure. I have been taking it for three years, 250 mg a day.

DEAR READER — There are always side effects to all medicines, including aspirin and even to most foods, for some people.

Diuril and most of the other medicines that people take to eliminate water from the body act by causing the kidney to eliminate sodium. As sodium is eliminated it takes the excess water with it to maintain the proper concentration of salt in water for your body.

In addition to eliminating sodium, other salts may be lost, including the loss of potassium and magnesium. Small doses of water pills over a long period of time will not cause any harm in people on normal diets who are not exposed to heat or conditions that impose excessive sweating. From that point you move into the broad spectrum of multiple problems caused by too much loss of sodium, potassium, magnesium or other minerals, that may occur with increased dosage and increased elimination of salt and water. I wouldn't think that the small dose you are taking would likely cause you any problem.

I have mentioned the problem of loss of potassium from these medicines in previous columns. You can help avoid this by including plenty of fruit and fruit juices in the diet. Long term use of these medicines can lead to low magnesium levels, too. You need magnesium in the process that controls body temperature, formation of body proteins, muscular contractions and many functions closely related to the actions of calcium. Incidentally, alcoholism, diabetes and disorders that cause poor absorption from the intestines may also cause low magnesium levels.

Dog benefit fails to pay

COLO, Iowa (AP) — The former "Dog Lady of Des Moines" thought her troubles were over when pool hustler Minnesota Fats agreed to a benefit for her 200 dogs.

But the exhibition lost money. Only 250 persons showed up, and their tickets didn't even pay the rent for the auditorium. A friend made up the difference.

"I'm just sick about it," said Lena McDonald, 65. "What am I going to do now?"

Mrs. McDonald and her dogs moved to a farm near Colo after the Iowa Supreme Court ruled last year that she could keep no more than five dogs in Des Moines. Since then, she has gone deeper and deeper into debt, paying food and veterinary bills.

She wrote to fellow dog-lover Minnesota Fats — Rudolf Wanderone of Dowell, Ill. — to ask for a small donation. Instead, he offered to put on the ill-fated benefit.

November snow falls

50 years ago
November 5, 1925

The $82,000 sewer bonds of Sikeston, authorized at a special election on October 20, were sold at auction yesterday in the city council room and brought a premium of $2,050. This means that the city will get $84,050 for the issue.

Some of the gloom which gradually gathered during a month and more of almost continuous rainy weather and culminated with a big slump in the cotton market last week was dispelled by fair weather the first of this week and a decided upward trend in cotton prices.

A blanket of snow covered Southeast Missouri last Thursday, a most unusual occurrence for October. In fact, only a few old folks can remember when a sizeable snow fell in this section during the month of October.

Wednesday evening, the pupils of the seventh, eighth, ninth and 10th grades of the public school gave a program of merit in the way of gymnastic exercises, relay games, and physical culture feats, before an audience of about 300 friends and patrons of the school.

A five-room frame house is being built on Lake street for Mrs. Florence Marshall of Blodgett.

Work was started Wednesday on a house which Clyde Frey is building on a North Kingshighway lot.

Missouri vacations safe

JEFFERSON CITY — A currently popular movie points up the safety of Missouri vacations, according to the state's Division of Tourism. "Missouri has over 19,000 miles of rivers and over 718,000 acres of lakes," says Director Jim Pasley, "yet with all our water we've never had a single reported shark attack."

Missouri is a great state for water-oriented fun. In fact, landlocked Missouri has m ore water than just about any other state. You can swim, fish, water ski, picnic, camp and relax on or near any of Missouri's rivers and lakes, but you'll never be bothered by sharks. There are no great whites, no hammerheads, no threshers, no tigers -- not even a measly dogfish.

What's the law?

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Harry was a 100 per cent patriotic American -- so long as it didn't hurt business. Consequently, when his secretary Peaches was subpoenaed for jury duty, he gave her a note to the court authorities explaining that his business couldn't spare her for the prescribed two week period and requested that she be excused from servinga s a juror.

Peaches, however, wanted to be a juror and, when she told this to the authorities, they graciously accepted her. Harry, on the other hand, was not nearly as gracious when he learned what happened and fired Peaches which upset her terribly.

In fact, even though she got a better job a week later, she sued Harry for having bounced her.

"A citizen shouldn't be discharged for discharging his duties," complained Peaches in court, "and serving on a jury is an obligation of all citizens."

"In the absence of a contract or a law prohibiting same," responded Harry, "an employer can fire an employe at any time for any reason -- just like an employe can quit a job at any time for any reason. Consequently, since I had no contract with Peaches and I violated no law in doing so, I had every right to fire Peaches."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Harry pay for canning Peaches?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while an employer is generally free to fire an employee at will,, absent a contract or law prohibiting same, there are circumstances where this is not so, such as in this case.

The jury system being highly regarded as an American institution, an employer cannot be permitted with impunity to discharge an employe for fulfilling his or her obligation to serve on a jury since it would adversely affect the entire jury system. The will of the community, concluded the judge, cannot be so thwarted.

(Based upon a 1975 Oregon Supreme Court Decision)

The first internment in the Woodlawn Cemetery, located in the Bronx, New York, was that of a Mrs. Phoebe E. Underhill in January, 1865, three months before Gen. Robert E. Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Dr. Lamb

Coffee may irritate colon

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would like more information on the foods containing caffeine. I have colitus and suffer so, I think my diet must be faulty.

DEAR READER — Coffee is irritating to some people's colon, and many readers have written me that their symptoms have disappeared after stopping it entirely. In most cases I think this is from the action of caffeine in the coffee, but it is true that some sensitive people don't tolerate the flavor oils in coffee, either.

To give you some information on how much caffeine you might find in beverages, send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 1-1, Coffee, Tea, Colas, Cocoa. You can send your request to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Enclose a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for mailing.

You may be surprised to see cocoa on the list. Many a mother gives her child cocoa to avoid the caffeine in coffee not knowing that cocoa also contains caffeine, and enough to give a child a good dose. The same applies to all cocoa products or chocolate.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if there are any side effects from taking Diuril for high blood pressure. I have been taking it for three years, 250 mg a day.

DEAR READER — There are always side effects to all medicines, including aspirin and even to most foods, for some people.

Diuril and most of the other medicines that people take to eliminate water from the body act by causing the kidney to eliminate sodium. As sodium is eliminated it takes the excess wate with it to maintain the proper concentration of salt in water for your body.

In addition to eliminating sodium, other salts may be lost, including the loss of potassium and magnesium. Small doses of water pills over a long period of time will not cause any harm in people on normal diets who are not exposed to heat or conditions that impose excessive sweating. From that point you move into the broad spectrum of multiple problems caused by too much loss of sodium, potassium, magnesium or other minerals, that may occur with increased dosage and increased elimination of salt and water. I wouldn't think that the small dose you are taking would likely cause you any problem.

I have mentioned the problem of loss of potassium from these medicines in previous columns. You can help avoid this by including plenty of fruit and fruit juices in the diet. Long term use of these medicines can lead to low magnesium levels, too. You need magnesium in the process that controls body temperature, formation of body proteins, muscular contractions and many functions closely related to the actions of calcium. Incidentally, alcoholism, diabetes and disorders that cause poor absorption from the intestines may also cause low magnesium levels.

Dog benefit fails to pay

COLO, Iowa (AP) — The former "Dog Lady of Des Moines" thought her troubles were over when pool hustler Minnesota Fats agreed to a benefit for her 200 dogs.

But the exhibition lost money. Only 250 persons showed up, and their tickets didn't even pay the rent for the auditorium. A friend made up the difference.

"I'm just sick about it," said Lena McDonald, 65. "What am I going to do now?"

Mrs. McDonald and her dogs moved to a farm near Colo after the Iowa Supreme Court ruled last year that she could keep no more than five dogs in Des Moines. Since then, she has gone deeper and deeper into debt, paying food and veterinary bills.

She wrote to fellow dog-lover Minnesota Fats — Rudolf Wanderone of Dowell, Ill. — to ask for a small donation. Instead, he offered to put on the ill-fated benefit.

Now there's a tavern in Iowa town

LINEVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Folks don't have to cross the street to Missouri to have a drink anymore. A tavern finally opened on the Iowa side.

"We did get tired of seeing our money go to the other side of the street," says Ruth Owens, a member of the Lineville City Council.

The town squats on the Iowa-Missouri state line.

For years, the 385 people on the Iowa side had been running to the 52 people on the Missouri side to buy things that were illegal on the Iowa side, including whiskey and fireworks.

Missouri had more liberal liquor laws, so the tavern business was relegated to the south side of the state line.

But in the summer of 1974, the lone tavern on the Missouri side of the street collapsed. Jim Perkins, 43, a retired Air Force veteran, and Harold Craig, 50, opened the Little Road Side Tavern on the Iowa side.

"It just fell flat down, all of her," said Craig. "The way it was leaning, everybody thought it was going to fall to the south, but instead it just fell straight in."

Since then, the Iowa Legislature has lowered the legal drinking age to 18.

Now the traffic on U.S. 65 is coming from the other direction, where 18-to 20-year-old Missourians cannot buy beer or liquor legally.

"I'm going to paint the front red, white and blue with a sign, 'Happy Birthday, America,' " Perkins said.

Biorhythms may explain ups and downs to some

NEW YORK (AP) — Biorhythms, theoretical human cycles used to explain those familiar ups and downs of life, are being touted as the latest way to chart your way around physical, emotional and intellectual troubles.

Many scientists and psychologists say biorhythm theories are pure pseudo-scientific bunk akin to astrology, but some industries and thousands of individuals are nevertheless preparing monthly biorhythm charts or having computers do it for them.

Proponents, many of them engaged in the business of selling biorhythm charts, claim biorhythm cycles begin at birth and can be plotted throughout life.

They say three rhythms — physical, emotional and intellectual — are fixed into cycles of 23, 28 and 33 days respectively. When drawn on a chart with the days of the month, the cycles appear as curves.

Like astrology, the individual's birthdate is needed to begin the chart, in addition to the month and year for which the information is sought. As the theory goes, there are six "critical" days each month when extra care should be used in one's action and thoughts. On the chart, these days appear where the curve crosses the middle of the chart.

Although first charted in the latter part of the 19th Century by Herman Swoboda, a Viennese psychologist, and later by Wilhelm Fleiss, a Berlin physician, no one really knows how biorhythm originated or who came up with the fixed periods of 23, 28 and 33 days.

"I'm convinced these cycles exist," said George W. Houk, vice president of Psi Rhythms, Inc. "Everyone seems to know they're there, but no one knows why they're there."

Houk has sold over 2,000 kits at $3.95 each for plotting biorhythm curves. He said he started his firm after learning of Japan's interest in the subject and seeing a potential for profit.

The Ohmi Railway Co. and other Japanese firms prepare biorhythm charts of their employes for use in accident prevention. One Japanese bus company posts the biorhythm charts of its drivers daily so they can use extra care or not drive at all when the curves are low or critical.

Bernard Gittelson, president of Biorhythm Computers, Inc., has devised a method for preparing biorhythm charts by computer. He has sold more than 50,000 charts at $9.95 for a 12-month chart and says he has been a consultant to corporations and airlines concerning the use of biorhythms for accident prevention.

"I find it valuable because we have been able to reduce accidents in factories by warning pople not to work on critical days," he said. "We find doctors are able to almost predict when a schizophrenic will have a tantrum. I have teachers tell me they have given intelligence tests to students and tell me when they are intellectually high or intellectually low."

Presidents Chester Arthur, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson were sons of ministers.

Prison medical care questioned

By JOHN BRITTINGHAM
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — By law every inmate of the state prison system is entitled to adequate medical care, but with only one full-time doctor and limited funding, such care is not always easy to get.

The five-story hospital at the Missouri State Penitentiary has 128 beds, but there are questions about whether there are enough trained personnel to treat the inmates.

Because medical care at Renz Farm, Church Farm and the Algoa Reformatory amounts to little more than first aid, these inmates must use the penitentiary hospital if they become seriously ill or hurt.

This leaves more than 3,000 inmates under the care of Dr. Edwin Key, the chief medical officer. Specialists come in periodically, but Key is the one who must deal with the day-to-day problems.

Key says more trained personnel are needed at the hospital. "We don't have enough money to have civilian employes around the clock on all floors," he said.

Key says there are about 100 people a day on sick call. With that number of cases, many never see the doctor.

Inmate Calvin Burks says it takes a "court order or an act of Congress" to see the doctor. He compares the procedure for treating patients to an assembly line.

"It takes about 10 seconds. You go up and say 'I've got a footache and a stomach ache.' They write it down and say 'Take two of these and move on.' Boom. You're done."

His statements are echoed by that of a nurse at one of the institutions who said she could see 50 to 60 patients in a morning.

Because of the lack of money, inmates are used to perform many of the functions of hospital employes. They act as nurses, orderlies and lab technicians.

Tom Varble, an inmate supervisor at the hospital, says this is the only option the prison has. "There is no other way we can do it. It's hard to get enough trained people here to work shifts," he said.

A suit filed July 8 against the prison by the American Civil Liberties Union charged that having inmates perform hospital services means inadequate medical care for the other inmates.

The inmates in whose name the suit was filed say they are not against inmates performing the hospital duties. They realize that if inmates don't do it, the job would never be done. But they say such training should be under supervision.

"You've got these guys who are learning by trial and error. If they have not had that kind of trial yet, they have not made the error yet. You're in trouble if you go to them. It could cause a serious problem," Burks says.

In addition to the overcrowding of the prisons, there are other reasons why an inmate does not get to see a doctor. Many inmates go to sick call for reasons other than sickness — to see a friend, get off work or obtain pills and "get high," medical personnel say.

"They don't ask for the doctor. They tell you what pills they want — tranquilizers, painkillers, anything that changes their mood. They'll throw the pills away if they're not what they wanted," Key said.

"All of our doctors and nurses have to be more realistic than people on the outside. You're constantly being conned for one thing or another inside a prison," says Donald Jenkins, who oversees the prison medical services for the Missouri Division of Corrections.

Yet taking this more realistic attitude means that some prisoners who are legitimately ill may be dismissed as malingerers.

One inmate, Lee Bailey, says he was sent to "The Hole" for trying to convince a hospital employe that he needed to see the doctor.

"The Hole" is a solitary confinement cell to which inmates are sent as punishment for rule violations.

"You have to just demand to see the doctor — become indignant about it. There's a sergeant standing there outside the doctor's office and if he sees you demanding treatment he'll write you up for a violation," he says. "I went to the hole. I never did see the doctor."

Computer will begin catching tax cheaters

By JIM KOSOWSKI
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The state of Missouri is losing an unknown amount of revenue because of antiquated methods of checking diesel fuel tax reports filed by interstate motor carriers.

For the last quarter of this year, the excise tax bureau of the Department of Revenue figured that approximately 1,000 of the state's interstate truckers did not file motor fuel tax reports on fuel bought at the pump.

The excise tax bureau now checks on delinquent truckers on a "hit and miss" basis because of the time factor involved with manually checking fuel tax records. Because of this haphazard method, the state has never known how much revenue it was losing.

The bureau, however, will begin using a computer early next year to help catch truckers who are delinquent in reporting and paying their diesel fuel tax.

The computer will be able to compare the names of truckers who do not file with the total list of motor carriers operating in Missouri. This will give the bureau a complete list of truckers who are delinquent in paying fuel taxes.

For fiscal year 1975, diesel fuel accounted for more than $18 million in revenue for Missouri, a small tax when compared to more than $177 million collected from gasoline taxes.

"The new computer program is a step in the right direction," says Jim Woodward, manager of the excise tax bureau. "Right now there are three ladies handling 13,000 quarterly reports, completely manually. This new system will tell us who is delinquent, who's filing and who isn't filing.

"Just processing the diesel fuel tax reports is now a full-time job. Once one quarterly reporting period has been finished we already have to get into the next quarter's report," Woodward says.

The majority of the truckers who do not pay their diesel fuel taxes are out-of-state operators who travel through Missouri only occasionally and either willfully or unwittingly do not file.

"The computer program we'll be using in the next quarter is a basic thing. We'll keypunch a card for every operator in Missouri. We'll then be able to cross-match on operators who file and those that do not," Woodward says.

"It's sad but true, we don't know how much money is involved, how much money is not being paid to the state," Woodward says.

"The sheer numbers, the volume of it is basically our problem," he says. "We'll be doing what we did before, only we'll be able to know who is not filing and take appropriate action."

For the delinquent truckers this will mean paying their diesel fuel tax money plus a $5 fee. If a trucker is caught being delinquent twice in a row he can have his license revoked.

A. Gerald Reiss, director of the division of tax and collection, says the problem in the excise tax bureau is part of an overall computer problem at the Department of Revenue.

"In the revenue department, the excise tax bureau is the last really good-sized area without any kind of automated assistance. In terms of completely manual operation, though, the excise tax bureau is doing a good job," Reiss ays.

Reiss says it is a problem of time, money and available computer capacity.

The growth of the trucking industry in Missouri, though, makes it imperative that the excise tax bureau begin and expand a program toward automation and away from manual processes, Woodward says.

FOREIGN FARM PRODUCT COMPETITION

American farmers are the most productive in the world, but their productivity sometimes goes unrewarded when they are forced to compete in the marketplace with heavily subsidized foreign imports.

Dairy and meat products are a case in point. Because of these subsidies, the United States enforces a quota on imports of such food products. But quotas only ease the problem; they are not a total answer.

Looser Health Standards

Imported dairy and meat products still enjoy the advantage of less stringent sanitation standards than are imposed upon American farmers and food processors. Incredibly, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration conducts only limited inspection of such products when they enter this country. Only 10 per cent of imported dairy products, for example, are inspected at all. Even that small sample, however, has turned up shocking violations of health standards.

In June 1973, 111,700 pounds of milk powder from Canada were rejected because they contained dead rodents and rodent filth. In September of the same year, the Department of Agriculture imposed restrictions on the use of imported non-fat dry milk because considerable portions had been produced in countries infested with foot-and-mouth disease.

These are only a few of the violations that led FDA to reject nearly 7 per cent of all imported dairy products inspected in 1973. That was a good year. A few years earlier, FDA rejected 24 per cent of all imports sampled.

Livestock, Dairy Vital to Missouri

The livestock and dairy industries are a vital part of Missouri's agricultural economy. In 1973, cash receipts for livestock sales in the state were $1.2 billion and for dairy products $195 million.

I think it is unfair to require Missouri farmers to meet health and sanitation standards not enforced against their foreign competitors. In order to remedy the situation, I have co-sponsored a bill in the Senate to require all foreign meat and dairy imports to undergo the same complete inspection as applies to domestic products and, moreover, to require that foreign producers pay for the cost of such inspections. In addition, the act would require that all imported meat and dairy products be clearly labeled "imports."

Quite apart from the question of foreign competition, I believe this legislation is essential for the protection of public health.

MU-Rolla will conduct research at iron mine

ROLLA — The University of Missouri- Rolla Rock Mechanics and Explosives Research Center will be conducting research from time to time at a former surface iron mine at the Old Hays cut near Iron Mountain. The area will be a field laboratory for the UMR research center.

Faculty, staff and students are working on projects investigating new ways of breaking rock more quietly and safely than methods now in general use. This research is sponsored by both the federal government and individua' industries.

For the past three years UMR has had a field laboratory in an old quarry near Graniteville, where research was done using Missouri red granite. Material in the new area consists primarily of felsite.

Both mechanical means and blasting (using very small charges) are used in the fragmentation research. Safety regulations are in effect at all times and the shock and noise from blasting will be at minimum levels.

The new field laboratory is being provided the university through an agreement with the Black Trap Rock Co.

Researcher says, outlook bright for artificial heart

DETROIT (AP) — A pioneer researcher in the use of artificial organs says the outlook is bright for the development of a totally artificial heart for humans.

"Remarkable progress has been made in the past few years with the artificial heart," Dr. Willem J. Kolff reported Thursday to an international heart surgery symposium at Henry Ford Hospital.

Kolff, inventor of an artificial kidney, is professor of surgery at the University of Utah.

"We believe the future for the artifical heart is bright," he said. "In an affluent society, most people do not want to die, yet heart disease is the greatest killer."

Kolff said an artificial heart already has been developed that is able to sustain animals of adult human size for up to three months.

"We can expect that these artificial organs will be gradually improved and we can therefore make the unavoidable prediction that the American citizen, when faced with the alternative of death, will not be refused an artificial heart if he and his family want it."

But Kolff told some 450 surgeons attending the symposium that "before a patient's chances are reduced to a choice between heart transplantation or an artificial heart, every effort should be made to salvage his own heart."

Kolff reported on his experiments with calves in which an artificial heart had been implanted. The longest survivals were 78 days and 94 days.

Kolff said some serious problems remain to be solved before experiments on humans can begin.

"We will have nothing to do with the implantation of an artificial heart until we are convinced that the artificial heart that we will present has an excellent chance to rehabilitate the patient," Kolff said.

Another surgical pioneer, Dr. Clarence Dennis of the City College of New York at Stony Brook, agreed there is a bright future for the artificial heart.

Dennis, who was the first surgeon to use a mechanical pump support for chronic heart failure, said the artificial heart probably would be perfected for human use sometime in the 1980s.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Mricka Mrnacaj may be the oldest person ever to apply for U.S. citizenship.

Mrs. Mrnacaj, who came here from Albania by way of Yugoslavia to live with her two sons and their wives and 10 grandchildren in the Bronx, knows that it takes five years to become a citizen. And she knows that in five years she will be 116.

"I came here because I want to be with my sons and be American like them," said the spry Mrs. Mrnacaj, born in 1864. "There is no other country like this, and I'm happy to be here."

Mrs. Mrnacaj, her husband and seven of their 13 children fled Albania for Yugoslavia when she was only 95. She decided to come to America after her husband died in 1972 at age 108.

FOREIGN FARM PRODUCT COMPETITION

American farmers are the most productive in the world, but their productivity sometimes goes unrewarded when they are forced to compete in the marketplace with heavily subsidized foreign imports.

Dairy and meat products are a case in point. Because of these subsidies, the United States enforces a quota on imports of such food products. But quotas only ease the problem; they are not a total answer.

Looser Health Standards

Imported dairy and meat products still enjoy the advantage of less stringent sanitation standards than are imposed upon American farmers and food processors. Incredibly, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration conducts only limited inspection of such products when they enter this country. Only 10 per cent of imported dairy products, for example, are inspected at all. Even that small sample, however, has turned up shocking violations of health standards.

In June 1973, 111,700 pounds of milk powder from Canada were rejected because they contained dead rodents and rodent filth. In September of the same year, the Department of Agriculture imposed restrictions on the use of imported non-fat dry milk because considerable portions had been produced in countries infested with foot-and-mouth disease.

These are only a few of the violations that led FDA to reject nearly 7 per cent of all imported dairy products inspected in 1973. That was a good year. A few years earlier, FDA rejected 24 per cent of all imports sampled.

Livestock, Dairy Vital to Missouri

The livestock and dairy industries are a vital part of Missouri's agricultural economy. In 1973, cash receipts for livestock sales in the state were $1.2 billion and for dairy products $195 million.

I think it is unfair to require Missouri farmers to meet health and sanitation standards not enforced against their foreign competitors. In order to remedy the situation, I have co-sponsored a bill in the Senate to require all foreign meat and dairy imports to undergo the same complete inspection as applies to domestic products and, moreover, to require that foreign producers pay for the cost of such inspections. In addition, the act would require that all imported meat and dairy products be clearly labeled "imports."

Quite apart from the question of foreign competition, I believe this legislation is essential for the protection of public health.

Computer will begin catching tax cheaters

By JIM KOSOWSKI
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The state of Missouri is losing an unknown amount of revenue because of antiquated methods of checking diesel fuel tax reports filed by interstate motor carriers.

For the last quarter of this year, the excise tax bureau of the Department of Revenue figured that approximately 1,000 of the state's interstate truckers did not file motor fuel tax reports on fuel bought at the pump.

The excise tax bureau now checks on delinquent truckers on a "hit and miss" basis because of the time factor involved with manually checking fuel tax records. Because of this haphazard method, the state has never known how much revenue it was losing.

The bureau, however, will begin using a computer early next year to help catch truckers who are delinquent in reporting and paying their diesel fuel tax.

The computer will be able to compare the names of truckers who do not file with the total list of motor carriers operating in Missouri. This will give the bureau a complete list of truckers who are delinquent in paying fuel taxes.

For fiscal year 1975, diesel fuel accounted for more than $18 million in revenue for Missouri, a small tax when compared to more than $177 million collected from gasoline taxes.

"The new computer program is a step in the right direction," says Jim Woodward, manager of the excise tax bureau. "Right now there are three ladies handling 13,000 quarterly reports, completely manually. This new system will tell us who is delinquent, who's filing and who isn't filing.

"Just processing the diesel fuel tax reports is now a full-time job. Once one quarterly reporting period has been finished we already have to get into the next quarter's report," Woodward says.

The excise tax bureau is concerned more with motor carriers who fill their tanks on the road. Motor carriers who maintain bulk storage are much less a problem, Woodward says.

The majority of the truckers who do not pay their diesel fuel taxes are out-of-state operators who travel through Missouri only occasionally and either willfully or unwittingly do not file.

"The computer program we'll be using in the next quarter is a basic thing. We'll keypunch a card for every operator in Missouri. We'll then be able to cross-match on operators who file and those that do not," Woodward says.

"It's sad but true, we don't know how much money is involved, how much money is not being paid to the state," Woodward says.

"The sheer numbers, the volume of it is basically our problem," he says. "We'll be doing what we did before, only we'll be able to know who is not filing and take appropriate action."

For the delinquent truckers this will mean paying their diesel fuel tax money plus a $5 fee. If a trucker is caught being delinquent twice in a row he can have his license revoked.

A. Gerald Reiss, director of the division of tax and collection, says the problem in the excise tax bureau is part of an overall computer problem at the Department of Revenue.

"In the revenue department, the excise tax bureau is the last really good-sized area without any kind of automated assistance. In terms of completely manual operation, though, the excise tax bureau is doing a good job," Reiss says.

Reiss says it is a problem of time, money and available computer capacity.

The growth of the trucking industry in Missouri, though, makes it imperative that the excise tax bureau begin and expand a program toward automation and away from manual processes, Woodward says.

MU-Rolla will conduct research at iron mine

ROLLA — The University of Missouri- Rolla Rock Mechanics and Explosives Research Center will be conducting research from time to time at a former surface iron mine at the Old Hays cut near Iron Mountain. The area will be a field laboratory for the UMR research center.

Faculty, staff and students are working on projects investigating new ways of breaking rock more quietly and safely than methods now in general use. This research is sponsored by both the federal government and individua' industries.

For the past three years UMR has had a field laboratory in an old quarry near Graniteville, where research was done using Missouri red granite. Material in the new area consists primarily of felsite.

Both mechanical means and blasting (using very small charges) are used in the fragmentation research. Safety regulations are in effect at all times and the shock and noise from blasting will be at minimum levels.

The new field laboratory is being provided the university through an agreement with the Black Trap Rock Co.

Researcher says, outlook bright for artificial heart

DETROIT (AP) — A pioneer researcher in the use of artificial organs says the outlook is bright for the development of a totally artificial heart for humans.

"Remarkable progress has been made in the past few years with the artificial heart," Dr. Willem J. Kolff reported Thursday to an international heart surgery symposium at Henry Ford Hospital.

Kolff, inventor of an artificial kidney, is professor of surgery at the University of Utah.

"We believe the future for the artifical heart is bright," he said. "In an affluent society, most people do not want to die, yet heart disease is the greatest killer."

Kolff said an artificial heart already has been developed that is able to sustain animals of adult human size for up to three months.

"We can expect that these artificial organs will be gradually improved and we can therefore make the unavoidable prediction that the American citizen, when faced with the alternative of death, will not be refused an artificial heart if he and his family want it."

But Kolff told some 450 surgeons attending the symposium that "before a patient's chances are reduced to a choice between heart transplantation or an artificial heart, every effort should be made to salvage his own heart."

Kolff reported on his experiments with calves in which an artificial heart had been implanted. The longest survivals were 78 days and 94 days.

Kolff said some serious problems remain to be solved before experiments on humans can begin.

"We will have nothing to do with the implantation of an artificial heart until we are convinced that the artificial heart that we will present has an excellent chance to rehabilitate the patient," Kolff said.

Another surgical pioneer, Dr. Clarence Dennis of the City College of New York at Stony Brook, agreed there is a bright future for the artificial heart.

Dennis, who was the first surgeon to use a mechanical pump support for chronic heart failure, said the artificial heart probably would be perfected for human use sometime in the 1980s.

111 year old woman waits to be citizen

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Mricka Mrnacaj may be the oldest person ever to apply for U.S. citizenship.

Mrs. Mrnacaj, who came here from Albania by way of Yugoslavia to live with her two sons and their wives and 10 grandchildren in the Bronx, knows that it takes five years to become a citizen. And she knows that in five years she will be 116.

"I came here because I want to be with my sons and be American like them," said the spry Mrs. Mrnacaj, born in 1864. "There is no other country like this, and I'm happy to be here."

Mrs. Mrnacaj, her husband and seven of their 13 children fled Albania for Yugoslavia when she was only 95. She decided to come to America after her husband died in 1972 at age 108.

Social Security answers

Can a ruling be appealed?

Q. I just received a letter telling me I'm not eligible for supplemental security income. I disagree. Do I have a legal right to appeal this?

A. Yes. Under the law, you have the right to question any decision made on your claim. There are four steps in the appeals process. The first step is a reconsideration, which is a complete review of your case. You must request a reconsideration within 30 days from the date you receive the notice telling you of the original decision on your case. Just call or visit any Social Security office and the people there will help you.

Q. I've just sold my house and will be moving into an apartment on the first of next month. Should I notify Social Security now, or wait until I'm living at my new address?

A. You should notify the Social Security Administration now. Prompt notice helps assure delivery of your check to your new address without delay or interruption. You can report your move on the change-of-address form which is printed on the back of the envelope your check is delivered in. Be sure to give both your old and new address--including ZIP codes--and the Social Security claim number which appears on your Social Security check.

Q. My wife and I both will be 62 next year and I'd like to retire then. But my wife says we'll lose money because our benefits will be reduced, and she wants to wait until we're 65. Would we really get much less in benefits if we retire early?

A. The exact amount that your benefits will be reduced depends on the number of months you get checks before you reach 65. But even if you retire early, you'll get about the same value in total benefits over the years. You'll just receive smaller checks over a longer period of time.

Q. I get Social Security student benefits, and I'm transferring from the school I've been attending to a college out of state. Do I have to report this change to Social Security? I'll still be attending school full time.

A. Yes, you do have to report the transfer. The type of institution you attend can affect your monthly payments. You should also notify the Social Security Administration if you leave school, start attending on a part-time basis, get married or have a change in your earnings.

Q. My mother was very ill recently, and the doctor had to come to the house to treat her. Will her Medicare pay for his visit, or does it only cover office visits to the doctor?

A. Medicare's medical insurance helps pay for covered services your mother receives from her doctor no matter where she receives them--in her home, in his office, in a hospital or skilled nursing facility, or in any other location in the U.S.

Her medicare handbook explains what doctors' services are covered and how medical insurance helps pay for them. If your mother doesn't have a copy of the handbook, she can get one at any Social Security office.

Q. My nephews have been getting Social Security benefits since my sister-in-law died about a year ago. According to an article I recently read, the Supreme Court has ruled that widowed fathers can get Social Security payments. Does this mean that my brother is eligible for monthly checks on his late wife's work record?

A. He may be. Under a Supreme Court decision made in March 1975, monthly benefits can be paid to a father if he: is the widower of a woman who died while insured under Social Security, has not remarried and has in his care any unmarried child under 18 (or older if disabled before 22) who is entitled to benefits. Your brother can apply for father's benefits at any Social Security office.

Q. The people at the savings and loan association I deal with told me I can have my supplemental security income check deposited directly into my account if I want to. How would that help me?

A. Direct deposit of your check has several advantages. Even if you are away from home, you check would be deposited instead of setting in your mailbox. You wouldn't have any problem in cashing your check because it will go directly into your account. You wouldn't have to stand in line to cash or deposit your check. And you wouldn't have to worry about losing your check after you receive it.

Multiple death traffic accidents increase in 1975

JEFFERSON CITY—Multiple-death traffic accidents increased in Missouri during the first nine months of this year from the corresponding period in 1974.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol reports 86 multiple-death accidents between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30 of this year took the lives of 201 persons. During the same period last year, 75 traffic accidents killed 173 persons on Missouri streets and highways.

A study by the highway patrol of the multiple-death traffic accidents during the first nine months of this year showed that nine motor vehicle collisions took a total of 19 lives in January. In February, four persons were killed in two accidents. Fifteen lives were lost in seven mishaps during the month of March.

April was the worst month for multiple deaths, with 16 accidents killing 37 people. Nine mishaps took the lives of 20 people in May. The month of June recorded 29 traffic fatalities in 13 collisions.

Fifty-six For Freedom

A Series of Vignettes About the Fifty-six Signers of the Declaration of Independence. A Missouri Press Association Feature for the Bicentennial.

William Floyd of New York was practically ruined by the Revolution. Shy, Floyd preferred riding and hunting to studies and education. Later he compensated, in part, for this educational handicap with logic and sincerity. The New York delegation was waiting for instructions on how to vote on independence when the roll call was taken on July 2, 1776. The affirmative vote came later from the New York legislature. So, while he did not vote for independence, Floyd did sign the document with the other New York delegates on August 2. In Congress he was neither aggressive, nor brilliant, but as one colleague put it, "he never quits his chair." Tories plundered his woodlands and took over the family home appropriating farm implements, stock and household goods. His family escaped across Long Island Sound to Connecticut. While exiled from his home for seven years, Floyd received no income from his property. Floyd was one of New York's representatives in the first session of the U.S. Congress. In 1803, in his late sixties, Floyd deeded his farm to his son and set out with the rest of his family to make a new life in the western New York frontier. He died in 1821 at the age of 83. 18

Portageville upholds firing of police officer

PORTAGEVILLE — The City Council Monday night approved an earlier firing of a police officer by Mayor Don Rone despite objections raised by two aldermen.

In a vote on the mayor's firing of Officer Raymond Creasy, 29, Aldermen Bennie Goodman and Sonny Moylan voted in favor of Sonny Moylan votged in favor of the dismissal; alderman Pete Clay voted against the action; and alderman Pat McCrate abstained. Mayor Rone said he also votred affirmative, adding "That takes care of that."

Prior to the vote, Rone said he had been told that he didn't have the authority to fire Creasy and that he was bringing the matter before the board.

Rone said he had fired the officer after talking with Police Chief Joe Moore, who recommended that the man be fired.

Creasey was reportedly fired by Rone, following a minor incident involving a woman who is the sister of Rone's farm foreman. The foreman reportedly had threatened to quit his job if action was not taken against the officer who was said to have made derogatory remarks about the woman.

Alderman Clay stated he had made an investigation into the incident and that he could find no justification for Creasy's dismissal.

"The Chief recommends that the man be fired and we should go with the head of the department," Rone said.

"I think everybody has a right to defend himself, "Clay stated, "I can't find anything wrong whatever, so I think he should be brought in to tell the whole board everything from A to Z."

At this point Alderman McCrate said all he knew about the matter was a statement on the part of the mayor without any details that the mayor had given in a previous meeting with the aldermen. McCrate added that he would like to have more informatioin.

The mayor asked for comments and aldermen Moylan and Goodman both stated they had talked to chief Moore. Moylan said Moore had told him there were "plenty of reasons why Creasy should be let go." Goodman said he agreed that the board should go along with the chief as head of the department.

"I think anybody is subject to have his day in court," Clay said.

"I told Creasy if he didn't like what I was doing he could be here," answered Rone.

Clay said Creasy was in the police station next door and could be called in. Rone said, "I don't want to even talk to him about it."

Clay pointed out that officer Bud Slaughter was with Creasy at the time of the incident and that no action had been taken against Slaughter. Clay further remarked that Creasy was willing to take a lie detector test to support his statements about the controversy.

Rone then called for a vote on the matter.

Police chief Joe Moore who was present during the discussion did not make any comments and the mayor did not detail or specify Moore's recommendation.

This morning Moore stated that he had told the board a couple of months ago that he didn't believe Creasy, who has been on the force one year, would ever develop into a good officer. He said Creasy didn't see[illegible] have the capabilities to l[illegible]ice work and would not f[illegible] instructions.

"I would tell him certain things and he would not listen," Moore said, adding that he had told the board at that time, "I would just as soon let him go."

Moore said the board didn't take any action at that time. He denied that he had made any further recommendations concerning the dismissal of Creasy following the incident with the woman.

Another police officer Marlin Garner, who has been on the force two months, turned in his badge at 1 a.m. today after learning of Creasy's dismissal had been approved by the board.

A letter of resignation from Police Judge Taylor Noles Sr. was accepted.

The board unanimously approved the mayor's appointment of Paul Farris to fill the vacancy.

Farris will serve until the city election in April 1976. It was agreed to compensate Noles $90 for three weeks vacation he had earned.

The board accepted a bid of $8,068.80, submitted by Girardeau Contractors Inc., of Cape Girardeau, for resurfacing St. Anthony Street and Robin Lane.

Phil Kelley, chairman of the community betterment steering committee, appeared before the council to explain that the committee was preparing to conduct a community attitude self-survey as a step toward getting the community betterment committee actively functioning.

Board members agreed that it was a worthy project and that they would support and participate in the survey.The survey is to determine what citizens like about the community as well as what the citizens think would make Portageville a better community.

Cloyce Poore, New Madrid County sanitation officer, advised the board that the city has until Jan. 1, 1976 to submit a plan to the state for solid waste management.

It was agreed that a citywide solid waste disposal program was going to present many problems and city attorney Charles Spitler was asked to seek a six-month extension from the Bureau of Solid Waste Management.

In other action, the board approved a motion that the city will no longer place drainage tile, other than for driveways, for property owners after present commitments for city have been filed. However, the street department will continue to supervise the placement of tile by property owners to see that it correctly laid for proper drainage.

Fire Chief Jitney Foster was authorized to purchase four new fire extinguishers for the department.

Police Chief Moore discussed parking problems on King Street in the area of Bakers Supermarket and the Sears Store where no systematic parking is designated.

The board authorized the street department to stripe the area for parallel parking.

Moore also told the board that another person was needed in the police department for radio dispatching for 30 hours a week.

Rone said he would find out if an employe under Title Six funds in another department could be transferred to the police department.

The board withheld approval of an application for the police force until aldermen have an opportunity to interview him.

Taxpayers ask IRS

Is rent deposit taxable?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.)

Q. I started building a home last year and finished some of the construction on it in January 1975. Can I add on two more rooms before moving into the home later this year and qualify for the house purchase credit?

A. The Tax Reduction Act of 1975 provides that construction of a new residence must have started before March 26, 1975, in order to qualify for the credit. However, if a taxpayer is building a residence, only that part of the cost of construction properly allocable to work done after March 12, 1975, and before January 1, 1977, is subject to the credit. This means that you may qualify for the credit, but only for the construction of the two rooms and any other construction since March 12. Of course the new house must be your principal residence, and you must be the first occupant. The credit is equal to five per cent of the construction costs after March 12, subject to an overall limit of $2,000. The credit may not exceed your tax liability.

Q. I recently bought a house which I will rent a family. Is the security deposit I will receive from my tenants considered taxable income?

A. Security deposits received for the lessee's performance under the lease are not usually included in income when received. They are included in income when and to the extent they are appropriated by the lessor because of a default by the lessee. If an amount designated as a security deposit is to be applied as payment of rent for the last year of the lease, it is advance rent and must be reported when received.

Q. Please explain the new personal exemption tax credit.

A. Taxpayers filing their 1975 returns will be able to claim a credit of $30 against their tax liability for every personal or dependency exemption of $750 they take. The credit is not applicable to exemptions for blindness or old age.

Cooper fights for series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jackie Cooper was in a fighting mood, aiming his jabs at television critics, the networks and "The Family Hour."

His attitude was natural; he is battling for the survival of his new television series, "Mobile One." The odds seem long, but it's best not to bet against Cooper. After spending all but three of his 54 years in show biz world, he is a master of the art of survival.

Last week, ABC moved the series from Friday to Monday nights, which Cooper fears might be shifting from frying pan to fire.

"Our show had an impossible spot on Friday," he said. "We were up against not one, but three shows that have been in the top five — 'Sanford and Son,' 'Chico and the Man' and 'M-A-S-H.'

"But is Monday going to be any better? We'll be facing the powerhouse of 'Rhoda' and 'Phyllis' in the East and 'All in the Family' on the West Coast. We go on before the football game back there and afterward out here. And after three weeks we'll be pre-empted.

"Even with that competition, we managed to get a 20 to 22 per cent share of the audience on Friday. But if we can't start building on Monday, gaining more audience each week, we'll go down the tubes."

Cooper is enough of a realist to admit that "Moile One" is not the greatest TV series to come along since "The Defenders." When Jack Webb first suggested the show, Cooper declined. As an in-demand guest star ("Kojak," "The Rockford Files"), director (he won an Emmy for "M-A-S-H") and producer (he headed production at Screen Gems), he had no ambition to be tied down as a series star.

"But I was pleased that Jack had brought me a reporter, instead of the doctors, cops and private eyes that flood the networks," said Cooper. "When Jack talked about the show a second time, I was more interested. At that time he had the reporter in a small TV station in a small town. I argued that the audience wanted to see a reporter in a big city covering important news stories. Jack went along with me on that."

Cooper did not agree with the original inclination of the series, which tended toward the rush action of "Emergency:" ABC insisted, he said, and he quelled his instincts as producer-director — "I get a lot of money to stay out of it."

Portageville upholds firing of police officer

PORTAGEVILLE — The City Council Monday night approved an earlier firing of a police officer by Mayor Don Rone despite objections raised by two aldermen.

In a vote on the mayor's firing of Officer Raymond Creasy, 29, Aldermen Bennie Goodman and Sonny Moylan voted in favor of Sonny Moylan votged in favor of the dismissal; alderman Pete Clay voted against the action; and alderman Pat McCrate abstained. Mayor Rone said he also votred affirmative, adding "That takes care of that."

Prior to the vote, Rone said he had been told that he didn't have the authority to fire Creasy and that he was bringing the matter before the board.

Rone said he had fired the officer after talking with Police Chief Joe Moore, who recommended that the man be fired.

Creasey was reportedly fired by Rone, following a minor incident involving a woman who is the sister of Rone's farm foreman. The foreman reportedly had threatened to quit his job if action was not taken against the officer who was said to have made derogatory remarks about the woman.

Alderman Clay stated he had made an investigation into the incident and that he could find no justification for Creasy's dismissal.

"The Chief recommends that the man be fired and we should go with the head of the department," Rone said.

"I think everybody has a right to defend himself, "Clay stated, "I can't find anything wrong whatever, so I think he should be brought in to tell the whole board everything from A to Z."

At this point Alderman McCrate said all he knew about the matter was a statement on the part of the mayor without any details that the mayor had given in a previous meeting with the aldermen. McCrate added that he would like to have more informatioin.

The mayor asked for comments and aldermen Moylan and Goodman both stated they had talked to chief Moore. Moylan said Moore had told him there were "plenty of reasons why Creasy should be let go." Goodman said he agreed that the board should go along with the chief as head of the department.

"I think anybody is subject to have his day in court," Clay said.

"I told Creasy if he didn't like what I was doing he could be here," answered Rone.

Clay said Creasy was in the police station next door and could be called in. Rone said, "I don't want to even talk to him about it."

Clay pointed out that officer Bud Slaughter was with Creasy at the time of the incident and that no action had been taken against Slaughter. Clay further remarked that Creasy was willing to take a lie detector test to support his statements about the controversy.

Rone then called for a vote on the matter.

LIBERTY LINES

Commonwealth or Common Sense?

By ROBERT M. BARTELL

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)— Recently, I had the opportunity to testify before the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on the proposed admission of the Marianas Islands into the United States as a commonwealth.

As background, the Northern Marianas Islands are a part of Micronesia, a series of more than 2,000 islands forming three major archipelagoes in the Western Pacific Ocean. These Islands have been governed under a U.S. trusteeship since World War II. If one is to believe the chief sponsor of the bill, Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.), the Islands have steadfastly sought commonwealth or statehood status with the U.S. for 20 years.

Strangely, the natives of Micronesia rejected commonwealth status offered by this government as late as 1970. Then suddenly in 1975, about 75 percent of the citizens voted to become a commonwealth.

A U.S. commonwealth or territory shares in the national aspirations and benefits of the governing country, but its residents do not have to pay federal income taxes. All assessed taxes revert back to the local governing authority although the sovereign nation, in this case the U.S., picks up the defense tab and the cost of various government assistance programs.

I told the Committee it was not proper for the delegates of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam or the Northern Marianas to have voting delegates in the House of Representatives because they do not contribute taxes to the economy of our Nation.

When responding to a statement that they are in fact called "non-voting" delegates, I pointed out to the Senators that under Rule XII of the House, the delegates do indeed have a committee vote, and they can debate on the floor of the House. I added the fact that they have all the privileges of a regular member of the House, except for voting on the floor.

Many of the sponsors of the bill say these committee votes are unimportant. The truth is that a committee vote is of vital importance for it is in committee where the decision is made to reject or forward bills for consideration by the entire House.

Three votes on the floor of the House are not nearly so important as three votes in committee. This is simply because there are 435 members of the House and perhaps 30 members on a committee.

The bill to make the Northern Marianas a commonwealth also would award more than $117 million to the 14,335 citizens inhabiting the Islands, which averages about $8,200 per citizen.

Not bad, if you don't have to pay federal income taxes.

Fearing the loss of military bases in the South Pacific, the administration and the Pentagon have pushed for the admission of the Marianas. None of this is mentioned, however. What is stressed is the keen desire of the people of the Marianas to become American citizens. Thus to oppose their admission is unpatriotic.

Veterans invited to meeting Nov. 11

POPLAR BLUFF — Charles R. Armon, director of the Poplar Bluff Veterans Administration Hospital encourages all members of veterans organizations, their auxiliaries and the general public to attend a Veterans Day Bicentennial program at the hospital on Nov. 11. The formal ceremony is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

In addition to honoring all veterans who have served our country, there will be a display of historic flags from the Revolutionary War period. Highlights of the program will be the presentation of Silver Star and Purple Heart awards to a World War II veteran who has not received the award up to the present time.

All veterans organizations in Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas which are served by the Poplar Bluff VA Hospital are invited to participate in the ceremony and to have their post colors present.

Route One, recently took part in Crested Cap 75, a North Atlantic Treaty Organization training exercise in Germany.

The exercise was designed to maintain aircrew proficiency in instrument flying and radar bombing in support of allied forces in Europe.

Sgt. Wilson is a 1972 graduate of East Prairie High School, and Airman Kershaw is a 1973 graduate of Portageville High School.

From The Living Bible

Watch, for the day of the Lord is coming soon! On that day the Lord will gather together the nations to fight Jerusalem; the city will be taken, the houses rifled the loot divided, the women raped; half the population will be taken away as slaves, and half will be left in what remains of the city. Then the Lord will go out fully armed for war, to fight against th[illegible] nations. That day [illegible] feet will stand upo[illegible] the Mount of Olives, to the east of Jerusalem.

LIBERTY LINES

Commonwealth or Common Sense?

By ROBERT M. BARTELL

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)—Recently, I had the opportunity to testify before the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on the proposed admission of the Marianas Islands into the United States as a commonwealth.

As background, the Northern Marianas Islands are a part of Micronesia, a series of more than 2,000 islands forming three major archipelagoes in the Western Pacific Ocean. These Islands have been governed under a U.S. trusteeship since World War II. If one is to believe the chief sponsor of the bill, Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.), the Islands have steadfastly sought commonwealth or statehood status with the U.S. for 20 years.

Strangely, the natives of Micronesia rejected commonwealth status offered by this government as late as 1970. Then suddenly in 1975, about 75 percent of the citizens voted to become a commonwealth.

A U.S. commonwealth or territory shares in the national aspirations and benefits of the governing country, but its residents do not have to pay federal income taxes. All assessed taxes revert back to the local governing authority although the sovereign nation, in this case the U.S., picks up the defense tab and the cost of various government assistance programs.

I told the Committee it was not proper for the delegates of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam or the Northern Marianas to have voting delegates in the House of Representatives because they do not contribute taxes to the economy of our Nation.

When responding to a statement that they are in fact called "non-voting" delegates, I pointed out to the Senators that under Rule XII of the House, the delegates do indeed have a committee vote, and they can debate on the floor of the House. I added the fact that they have all the privileges of a regular member of the House, except for voting on the floor.

Many of the sponsors of the bill say these committee votes are unimportant. The truth is that a committee vote is of vital importance for it is in committee where the decision is made to reject or forward bills for consideration by the entire House.

Three votes on the floor of the House are not nearly so important as three votes in committee. This is simply because there are 435 members of the House and perhaps 30 members on a committee.

The bill to make the Northern Marianas a commonwealth also would award more than $117 million to the 14,335 citizens inhabiting the Islands . . . which averages about $8,200 per citizen.

Not bad, if you don't have to pay federal income taxes.

Fearing the loss of military bases in the South Pacific, the administration and the Pentagon have pushed for the admission of the Marianas. None of this is mentioned, however. What is stressed is the keen desire of the people of the Marianas to become American citizens. Thus to oppose their admission is unpatriotic.

Veterans invited to meeting Nov. 11

POPLAR BLUFF — Charles R. Armon, director of the Poplar Bluff Veterans Administration Hospital encourages all members of veterans organizations, their auxiliaries and the general public to attend a Veterans Day Bicentennial program at the hospital on Nov. 11. The formal ceremony is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

In addition to honoring all veterans who have served our country, there will be a display of historic flags from the Revolutionary War period. Highlights of the program will be the presentation of Silver Star and Purple Heart awards to a World War II veteran who has not received the award up to the present time.

All veterans organizations in Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas which are served by the Poplar Bluff VA Hospital are invited to participate in the ceremony and to have their post colors present.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, November 5, the 309th day of 1975. There are 56 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, U.S. election returns showed that President Franklin Roosevelt had been elected to an unprecedented third term.

On this date:

In 1605, a conspirator, Guy Fawkes, was seized as he was about to blow up the British House of Lords.

In 1872, the suffragist, Susan B. Anthony, voted for Ulysses Grant for President. Women did not have the vote, and she was fined $100 for illegal voting.

In 1912, Woodrow Wilson was elected President.

In 1930, American novelist Sinclair Lewis was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature.

In 1940, election returns were televised for the first time.

In 1946, a new career in politics began as John Kennedy was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives at the age of 29.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Dean Rusk said the U.S. military effort to prevent a Communist victory in South Vietnam was progressing well but cautioned that some severe fighting lay ahead.

Five years ago: The Vatican issued a detailed reform of the Roman Catholic Mass, giving women a greater role in the litany.

One year ago: Hugh Carey was elected governor of New York.

The visitors to McDonnell Douglas first saw the prologue room which is a museum in the headquarters building. They were then guests of the company for lunch, and the first session began at 1 p.m.

Cowboy rides into sunrise

SHELDON, Ill. (AP) — After his fourth heart attack, cowboy Charles Good rode off his Nevada spread on his Indian pony and into the sunrise to see as much of the East as he could.

On a stop in Sheldon on his saddle trip to Pennsylvania the leathery, 59-year-old maverick said he never had been as far East as Cheyenne, Wyo. and just wanted to take in a hunk of the rest of the country and, maybe, see his two sisters somewhere along the way.

Last March he said he packed his bedroll, an extra shirt and a razor and mounted Buck, a 25-year-old pony he raised from a bottle.

He said adios to his coyote, Bob; his brother, Harry L.; 38,000 head of white-faced herefords, and a 190,000-acre ranch near Reno, Nev.

"I had this feelin' that the sun was beginning to set on me. So I figured me and Buck better hightail it."

Good, a bachelor, camps out most of the time.

"We hole up at nights under some trees away from the road and I let Buck graze," he said. "He always stays by me, though. I grub at roadside stands. Costs about $4 a day including Buck's hay and some oats.

"I'm makin' it the only way I know how—on horseback. And we are doing it by skirtin' the cities. Buck does a fast walk along the ground next to the concrete and we've been makin' about 40 miles a day."

Good said his journey almost ended in Kansas City when he was stricken by his fifth heart attack.

"I had this feelin' comin' on and I knew it wasn't good," he said.

"Old Buck rode me straight into town. He took me right up to the medical center and through the emergency room door."

"I was chompin' at the bit for several weeks waitin' to get out. The doc warned me about the trip, but he told me it was my life. And you know what, it sure enough is. Been feelin' pretty good ever since, except for a cold."

Good said, "When our journey is over, me and Buck will take the tran home.

Durant does not fear death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vibrantly alive and still working on the eve of his 90th birthday, historian-philosopher Will Durant views the future with his customary calm.

"I have no fear of death," he says. "I think it's one of the greatest things that life has devised. It clears away the debris that mankind has accumulated."

Durant and his wife and coauthor, Ariel, will mark his birthday Wednesday with a luncheon in their honor given by Pepperdine University. Otherwise, they will pass the day as they have during most of their 62 years of marriage — reading and discussing the wisdom and folly of human history.

Never a pessimist, Durant nonetheless takes a baleful look at today's world: "The general theme of my life is the discovery that order is the mother of liberty, and liberty is the mother of chaos."

The present plight of New York City bears out his belief, he says — "a good example of liberty becoming chaos." He also deplores the new fiction which has brought "the joyous and proud introduction of four-letter words; I've gone beyond four-letter words."

His greatest concern: "The family has gone to pieces and marriage has gone, too. That is unfortunate, because they are two marvelous forms of order that can be pillars of strength in the flux of modern life....

"If you get rid of the state, the family can maintain order. But get rid of the family and you have nothing."

This week also marks publication of the 11th volume of the Durants' "Story of Civilization." The new one is "The Age of Napoleon," covering European history from 1789 to 1815.

Will and Ariel, whom he married in 1913 when he was 28 and she was 15, continue their unchanging regimen in the book-crammed home they have occupied on a Hollywood hillside for 32 years. Will is up at 7 a.m., takes an hour to read the Los Angeles Times, starts work at 9, reading and writing with a board across the arms of his chair to serve as a table. After lunch he naps, works two hours in the garden, showers, has a light supper, and works until 10 p.m.

Caine is loyal to England

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "A person is happiest in his own country. The only reason to leave is if the government decides to destroy you and your future and your way of living."

Michael Caine was explaining why he has not joined the exodus from England of movie and rock stars seeking a better financial climate in America or such tax havens in Switzerland or Spain.

Caine is now making a movie here — Columbia's "Harry and Walter Go to New York" with James Caan and Elliott Gould — giving rise to rumors that he would be a permanent resident.

"Not true," the actor says firmly. "I'll be back home for an English Christmas."

Caine's loyalty to the home country is far removed from "There'll Always Be an England" spirit of another era. Far, far removed. He is a cockney and proud of it, his normal speech lapsing into the tones of his native London. He is scornful of the "ruling clahsses," but just as much against the Labor government.

"Emotionally, I am a socialist, but I am antiextremist," he said. "I hate the extreme right and the extreme left like poison. People should use their politicians. That is what happens in America; you use your politicians and then throw them away, sometimes brutally so. But that's as it should be. In England, the politicians use the people and throw them away."

The actor, born Maurice Micklewhite 42 years ago, said he'll remain in England despite a tax structure that can take as much as 83 per cent of his heavy earnings. He lives more reasonably than most international stars of his status, occupying a 250-year-old mill near Windsor.

"I live like a peasant, albeit one who earns a million dollars," he said with a touch of irony. "When I slam the iron gate behind, I leave the world outside. My wife and children and I lead a very self-contained life."

Caine hasn't filmed in England since "Sleuth" three years ago, but he said that he wants to make a couple of movies there "to help keep the industry alive."

He remarked, "There's very little left right now. About all the English are making is softporn and television spinoffs. The rest is all American production. The American directors who helped keep the English industry in business — Stanley Kubrick, Joseph Losey, Carl Foreman, etc. — have all left or are leaving."

All is not politics with Michael Caine. He talked about his costarring with Sean Connery in "The Man Who Would Be King," directed earlier this year in North Africa by John Huston.

"Sean and I worked very well together," he said. "None of that vying for position that some actors do. In fact, Sean and I choreographed our scenes so that when one of us had a punchline, he was facing the camera. I think audiences recognize and appreciate that kind of camaraderie, and it gives an added quality to the film."
